Banks Measure Passes in House By 271-110 Vote

Only 11 Democrats Desert Party Fold

Glass Leads Opposition Awaiting Control Bill in Senate.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

By a strictly party vote, the House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate the controversial Eccles banking bill, which centralizes control over the Nation's credit and currency in the Federal Reserve Board.

Action came late in the day after all Republican attempts to curb the powers of the Reserve Board had been beaten down, and after Representative T. Alan Goldsborough Democrat), Maryland, had failed for the second time to insert his "commodity dollar" amendment.

The vote on final passage was 271 to 110, with only 11 Democrats deserting to the opposition and only three Republicans voting with the Administration.

The omnibus banking bill thus becomes the third major measure to pass the House at this session, the others being the $4,880,000,000 work-relief bill and the social security legislation. The House is now far in advance of the Senate, which has approved only the works bill.

Lying in wait for the banking bill when it reaches the Senate is Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, who dislikes centralizing bank control in Washington. Leaders concede the course of the banking bill in that branch of Congress will be uncertain as it is sure to be stormy.

Ends Two-Day Debate.

The roll call as the House ended two days of lively debate showed the following Democrats aligned with the Republican opposition:

Binderup, Nebraska; Connery, Massachusetts; Duffey, Ohio; Eicher, Iowa; Fiesinger, Ohio; Higgins, Massachusetts; Hoeppel, California; McGroarty, California; Peterson, Georgia; Truax, Ohio, and Whelchel, Georgia.

Republicans who voted for the measure were Stefan, Nebraska; Welch, California, and Wolverton, New Jersey.

The banking bill suffered only one minor casualty in weathering House passage. That came Wednesday when the lower chamber agreed to an amendment striking out a subsection which granted pensions to Reserve Board members on retirement.

Otherwise the bill was sent to the Senate in the same form it came from the desk of the new liberal-minded Gov. Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board. It was Eccles' first skirmish with Congress, but whether he will score a victory rests with the Senate.

As approved by the House, the bill makes permanent the temporary insurance of bank deposits, empowers the Reserve Board to control open-market operations of the whole Reserve System, and otherwise enables it to prevent undue credit expansion or contraction by varying bank reserves.

An assault on this latter section of the measure was led at the opening by Representative John B. Hollister (Republican), of Ohio, ranking minority member of the House Banking and Currency Committee. His amendment to kill this section, however, was easily defeated, 78-44.

Conversion Move.

Representative O. H. Cross (Democrat), of Texas, subsequently headed a movement to convert the Federal Reserve System into a Government bank by Treasury purchase of the $140,000,000 stock in Reserve banks now held by member institutions.

He was joined by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, who succeeded in amending this proposal so as to sweep into the Treasury all surplus earnings of the Reserve system after the stockholders had been paid off.

While Patman contended that "ownership, as well as control," was needed to administer the Nation's banking, Representative Clyde Williams (Democrat), of Texas, countered that to buy the Reserve Bank stock would mean "the destruction of the Federal Reserve System."

The Cross-Patman amendment was defeated when it came to a test, 112 to 61.

Debate reached a furious pitch when Representative Frank Hancock (Democrat), of North Carolina, sought to require that all State banks receiving deposit insurance be forced to join the Federal Reserve System by July 1, 1938.

Unified System Argued.

He declared that, of a total of 16,000 banks, not more than 7,000 belong to the Reserve system. He contended it was necessary "to unify the banking system" in order to maintain effective control.

Chairman Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, who heads the Banking and Currency Committee, waved his arms in vigorous opposition to this proposal, arguing

RAYMOND HAMILTON.

All Hope Gone, Hamilton Near Death in Chair

Texas Outlaw and His Confederate Both Wear Crosses in Last Hour.

By the Associated Press.

Huntsville, Tex., May 9.—Raymond Hamilton, the braggart hoodlum who has threatened to "come back and haunt" those who condemned him to die, faced atonement in the electric chair tonight for viciousness ranging from 'teen-age petty larceny to murder by the time he was old enough to vote.

At 22, the dapper killer—former lieutenant of the later gangster, Clyde Barrow and his cigar-smoking gun moll, Bonnie Parker—was sentenced to pay with his life for killing a penitentiary guard.

The guard, Major Crowson, was shot down when Barrow and his reckless consort—later slain with him by officers—freed young Hamilton from a State prison farm, at Eastham, Tex., in January, 1934.

Tries to Save Braggart.

With Hamilton tonight, as in the deadly Eastham break, was Joe Palmer, a defiant convict, who insisted to the last that he shot Crowson because he hated him and that Hamilton's bullets went wild.

Hamilton's execution was set immediately following that of Palmer, who was prepared to enter the death chamber shortly after midnight (1 a. m., Eastern standard time).

Hamilton's last hope for life departed today when the Court of Criminal Appeals denied petitions presented in his behalf and Texas' Governor, James V. Allred, declined to act.

Governor Allred said Hamilton's record of crime was astounding.

"However heart-rending it may be for me personally to have to pass on these death penalty cases," said the Governor, "I have concluded that the Governor is not acting as an individual but as a part of the institution of government."

With death staring them in the face Hamilton and Palmer were said today by Lee Simmons, general manager of the Texas prison system,

Bonus Lobby Pushes Drive Against Veto

New Bill Plan Dropped, Roosevelt Believed Preparing Message.

Senate Prodded to Back Patman Plan; Poll Indicates Defeat.

By Robert C. Albright.

All prospect of a bonus compromise was abandoned yesterday. The President conferred with advisers on a probable veto message, and the most powerful veterans' lobby in history massed for a bitter-end fight to save the Patman bonus bill.

While the inflationary measure awaited final Senate release and the President's choice between signing and veto. Mr. Roosevelt gathered all available veterans' statistics preparatory to what observers believe will be a strong veto message. An informal poll indicated the Senate will sustain him.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Veterans Administrator Frank T. Hines; his assistant, Harold Breining, and Director of the Budget Daniel Bell were called to the White House. For an hour they discussed bonus figures with the President.

Roosevelt Cites Problem.

In a message to the St. Louis committee laying plans for the American Legion's 1936 convention, the President made no mention of the bonus.

"Our constant objective," he said, "is to care for the disabled, the sick, and the destitute. American legionnaires and the veterans of all wars support this national policy."

This echoed views expressed in the President's Roanoke (Va.) speech, widely interpreted as a stand against bonus full payment.

Dedicating a veterans' hospital at Roanoke, Mr. Roosevelt declared: "The care of the disabled, sick, destitute and starving is the first task of the country."

A plan to reconsider the 55-to-33 Patman bonus vote in the Senate was abandoned earlier in the day when Patman sponsors and members of the veterans' lobby refused to go along with a proposal to give the President his choice between full payment in Treasury notes, payment in sound dollars or allocation of $2,000,000,000 from the work relief pool.

The American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, united for the first time in recent bonus history behind a single bonus measure, brought terrific pressure to bear upon Senators throughout the day. Despite this activity, a canvass of Patman strength indicated they would fall about five votes short of the two-thirds ballot needed to override a White House veto.

Even the White House was not immune to lobbying efforts. Commander in Chief James E. Van Zandt of the Veterans of Foreign Wars appealed for 1,000,000 messages to be sent to the President in behalf of the Patman plan.

The appeal was made through V. F. W. department commanders in 48 States, 3,500 V. F. W. posts, with a membership of more than 250,000, and the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the organization, 100,000 strong.

The national commander called for organized mass meetings, house-to-house canvasses, contacts with business and social organizations, radio appeals to the public and telegrams to the President.

Coughlin Speech Anticipated.

The American Legion, which early this week threw its full support behind the Patman plan, also was militantly active. Legion executives throughout the country were asked to "wire the President not to veto and wire your Representatives and Senators if bill is vetoed to vote to override the veto." in telegrams sent out by Frank N. Belgrano, national commander. "We invite the support of the citizens of America in this cause," Belgrano added.

Other Patman advocates counted on Sunday's radio speech of Father Charles E. Coughlin to dispatch other messages to the White House. His speech last Sunday flooded the

Harvey Wiley, 'Best Fed Boy' Of '18, Elopes

Son of Late Food Crusader Weds Miss Hardgrove at Rockville.

The romance of Harvey J. Wiley, 22, once known as the "best-fed boy in America," and Florence E. Hardgrove, 21, of 1725 Varnum street northwest, blossomed into marriage yesterday when the couple eloped to Rockville, Md.

Wiley is the son of Mrs. Harvey J. Wiley, 2345 Ashmead place northwest, former president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and the late Dr. Wiley, internationally known as a pure-food crusader.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hardgrove. Her father was formerly connected with the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Only One Witness.

The mother of the bridegroom was surprised to learn of the marriage, saying she had not been informed of her son's intentions, while the mother of the bride said they had discussed plans for the wedding and had telephoned her from Rockville after the ceremony was performed.

Neither the bride or the bridegroom would discuss plans. They said very little to the Rev. K. Pasma, of Rockville Presbyterian Church, who performed the ceremony. The only other person at the wedding was one witness, whose name was not disclosed.

As to the future, the couple had little to say. Wiley is undecided whether he will continue his studies at Columbia Tech School.

Brother, Navy Honor Man.

Until Wednesday, Mrs. Wiley had been employed as secretary to J. W. Bell, manager of the Hamilton Hotel, having taken a position there after completing studies at Holton Arms School and Washington Secretarial School.

After the ceremony the couple went to dinner and stopped at the home of the bride's parents before they left on their honeymoon to an unannounced destination. Mrs. Hardgrove said the couple had been talking marriage a year, but their decision to get married yesterday was reached suddenly.

Harriman Sees Fast Recovery If U. S. Desists

Says New Deal's Methods Are Holding Up Billions in Investments.

By the United Press.

New York, May 9.—Rapid recovery, involving an actual labor shortage, was foreseen tonight by Henry I. Harriman, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, if the Government would delay its reform policies and make for a return of confidence.

He arraigned the New Deal's methods and charged that they were holding up billions of dollars of new investment in the capital goods industries. He found criticism of the New Deal increasing, not only from business, but also from all walks of life.

In a speech before the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, he laid down the following four points as a program for the restoration of confidence that would

British Spur Plane Output In Arms Race

Manufacturers Urged to Speed; Foreign Orders Forbidden.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 9.—Great Britain officially "took off" today in a grim race to match Germany's expansion of her air forces, disclosed by Adolf Hitler's recent defiant statement "we already have as many planes as England."

Shortly after King George sounded a strong note for peace before Parliament, assembled in historic Westminster Hall to pay him jubilee homage, a three-fold government action was disclosed, emphasizing the seriousness with which the menace of a powerfully armed Germany is viewed. The steps were:

1. The air ministry issued strict orders forbidding aircraft and airplane engine manufacturers to accept foreign orders and at the same time urged an immediate speeding up of production with the assurance that a huge expansion program for the royal air force would keep their works running full force at least two years.

2. It was learned the government intends extensive measures to educate the public against the perils of an air attack, probably with compulsory air raid drills throughout the nation.

3. Now that the jubilee holiday is over members of the cabinet are understood to be speeding a program of defense measures which will be presented to the House of Commons May 22.

The air ministry communication spurring manufacturers to accelerate production leaked out despite an injunction that it be kept strictly confidential.

An official of a leading aircraft firm said "the air ministry asked what maximum output could be secured and inferred that for a considerable period ahead sufficient orders will be available to keep the works at full pressure. This applies to military aircraft and refers to a period of at least two years."

Compulsory air raid drills, it was understood, will be modeled after Berlin's 'bomb-attack rehearsal." In addition to camouflage measures, civilians will be taught the use of gas masks. The program will be officially directed, as the government has decided the task is too important to leave in the hands of voluntary bodies, as in the past.

Speaking in Westminster, which he termed "the mighty heart of our empire," King George called his realm a "commonwealth of peace."

"In these days when fear and preparation for war are again astir in the world," his majesty asserted, "let us be thankful that quiet, government and peace prevail over so large a part of the earth's surface and that under our flag of freedom so many millions eat their daily bread in far distant lands and climates with none of them afraid."

Lauds Wife.

The ruler's clear voice faltered when he half turned to praise "my dear wife," Queen Mary. The eyes of both were wet when the sober legislators were led by the lord chancellor, his wig bobbing and his robes flying, in three cheers for the King and Queen.

The government's aviation program will be discussed May 22 in the House of Commons debate on air armament.

An official of an aircraft firm said the letter from the air ministry included "a statement to the effect that we are forbidden to execute foreign orders without first consulting the air ministry."

The official announcement explained the letter advised manufacturers "of the possibility of considerable demand in connection with the expansion of the royal air force, asking them to accelerate deliveries on the contracts already held and requesting them to inform the department of any foreign or civil orders which they propose to undertake before they commit themselves."

The pomp and pageantry accompanying Monday's thanksgiving

LORD JOSEPH DUVEEN.

Duveen Jokes In Testimony On Mellon Tax

Peer Cheerily Testifies Ex-Secretary Has Finest Collection in World.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

A lorid-faced, whimsical British art dealer, Lord Joseph Duveen, described Andrew W. Mellon's paintings as "the finest collection of old masters in the universe" here yesterday at an income tax hearing.

The witness supported the claims of the former Treasury Secretary in colorful language as a special appeal board delved further into the contest as to whether Mellon paid adequate income taxes in 1931.

Mellon occupied an inconspicuous seat near the counsel's rail as Lord Duveen from the witness stand offered to pay $750,000 for a picture which cost the former Cabinet officer only $503,000.

"Why, it's worth a million dollars," the British peer commented with an aggressive nod of his head.

"Annunciation" Highly Prized.

He referred to a work by Jan Van Eyck identified as "the "Annunciation."

Significance also was attached to testimony by the Briton in corroboration of Mellon's plans to give Washington a $19,000,000 national art gallery—which counsel for the Government have sought to discount as untrue.

The hearing was conducted in a tiny room into which only 40 or so spectators could be crowded. There was a mad scramble for seats at each intermission.

Mellon shared with Lord Duveen the interest of the throngs. The former Secretary laughed uproariously—as did evryone else—at the frequent quips of the art expert. In between sessions Mellon puffed vigorously on a cigar made along the lines of a cigarette.

Lord Duveen appeared delighted every time his auditors laughed at something he said, especially when the jokes were at his own expense. He sprinkled his replies with such typical English expressions as "by jove" and casually referred to his accountant as "my man" and to his clerk as "my clark."

When the questioning turned to a $75,000 profit earned by Lord Du-

Maneuver Opens Air Part of Games

Plans for Trip Veiled; Three Craft Falter at Take-off, Delay.

Copyright by the United Press.

Wheeler Field, Honolulu, May 9. The United States Navy today sent 45 fighting seaplanes speeding over the Pacific on an unprecedented maneuver scheduled to carry them 1,200 miles to Midway Island on the greatest mass flight ever undertaken.

Forty-eight ships took off from their base here at two-minute intervals during the morning, shooting through a dense smoke screen which blanketed the airport with war-time completeness.

Three encountered mechanical trouble and returned to the base as the others sped out over the waters in formations. It was undetermined whether the three would follow later. It was believed they and two or three others might follow, bringing the total to at least 50 in this hazardous water hop.

The first of the planes, which represent the entire Hawaiian aerial defenses, pointed its silver nose into the warm tropical air at 7:30 a. m. (12:50 p. m., E. S. T.), and headed westward ahead of the rising sun for the tiny, isolated cable station.

The others, all part of the gigantic United States Navy maneuvers in the North Pacific now under way, took off at two-minute intervals.

Few Witnesses.

The stirring sight was witnessed by only a handful of persons other than the officials and mechanics at the airport. The take-off was guarded as secretly as a war-time bombing raid.

Crowds stationed at a distance had difficulty in seeing the war planes as they darted through the smoke.

The first ships off circled above the smoke, awaiting others before going into formation for the long water hop to Midway to join other units in the fleet.

The smoke became so dense that one civilian who approached the cordon holding back spectators thought the Navy Yard was afire. Guards assured the spectator it merely was a demonstration of what might happen if actual war called Hawaii's aerial defenders into action.

The squadrons in this daring mass demonstration of the Navy's aerial might were commanded by Commander E. Wayne Tod, in charge of the Hawaiian aviation base.

The planes, loaded heavily as for wartime maneuvers against a potential enemy and averaging better than 100 miles an hour, should reach Midway Island under 12 hours—or about 7 o'clock tonight (1:30 a. m. Friday, Eastern daylight time).

The flight represents the opening of the aviation section of the gigantic naval maneuvers this month and involves 200 officers and men aboard the planes. Four to ten men were on each plane.

The planes represent the air phase of "problem 16," the present war game in the Pacific. The men seemed nonchalant as they warmed up the motors for the hazardous over-water hop for a spot far out over the Pacific.

Admiral Joseph H. Reeves, commander in chief of the fleet, ordered the flight. Officers said despite its significance it was "purely routine." Even their families were sworn to secrecy.

Whereabouts of the fleet, headed by Admiral Reeves' flagship, the Pennsylvania, likewise was a secret, but it was believed the "attacking" units were near Hawaiian waters.

Weather Perfect.

Some were believed strung out along the long over-water hop keeping in radio communication with the fliers. Perfect weather was reported along most of the route to Midway—but even officers admitted it would require the

17-Year-Old Granddaughter of Former Governor of Texas 'Wanted to Make Good;' Object of Widespread 10-Day Hunt.

Alice E. Colquitt, 17-year-old beauty, who had been missing for ten days, was back with her mother at 1722 Irving street northwest last night. She had been living in rooming houses here throughout the period of her absence, and for three days had been working as a waitress.

Her return did not altogether clear up the mystery surrounding her disappearance.

Mrs. Thomas Higgins, owner of a rooming house at 618 Massachusetts avenue northwest, where the young woman stayed a week, quoted her as saying that she was married.

Melvin H. Stonestreet, manager of the Alcazar Restaurant, in the 1700 block of L street northwest, where Alice worked as a waitress, said she told him she was not married.

A spokesman for the young woman's mother, Mrs. Elise Roberts, late last night stated emphatically that she was not married.

That Miss Colquitt, once adjudged the most beautiful girl at the Roosevelt High School, was found was due to the sharp eyes of Mrs. Higgins and the help of a young man whom she had described to the police.

Mrs. Higgins saw Miss Colquitt's photograph in a newspaper yesterday and telephoned the girl's mother. The latter in turn notified Detective R. F. McCarthy, of the Tenth Precinct.

Mrs. Higgins told the detectives that the girl had moved from her place Wednesday, not being able to pay her rent. She did not know where the girl had gone. However, she was able to describe a young man "with a limp" who had escorted her from the house.

This young man apparently was known to the family of Alice, for in about 20 minutes Detective McCarthy had him at the Higgins rooming house. Yes, Mrs. Higgins agreed, he was the young man who had been calling for Miss Colquitt.

A half hour later, Detective McCarthy called at a rooming house in the 1700 block of De Sales street and found the missing girl. Pre-

U. S. Finds April Maintained March Job and Pay Roll Gains

By the Associated Press.

A steady maintenance of business activity in April, after an employment and pay-roll expansion in March, was reported by the Commerce Department yesterday in its monthly survey, of current business.

In addition, the department noted that wholesale commodity prices advanced beyond 80 per cent of the 1926 average due "to the continued rise in the prices of farm products and foods." Farm prices were reported substantially higher than a year ago.

"Business activity has been maintained during April close to the level reached during the first quarter," the report said. "Most of the major production and distribution series for the first four months of the year have shown gains over the corresponding period of 1934, and, while the increase in the aggregate has been modest, individual industries and lines of trade recorded substantial gains.

"The construction industry continued to lag, notwithstanding the improvement in the residential building field.

"In April industrial output declined in comparison with March, according to the available weekly data, whereas there is usually very little change in the two months.

"The trend has been influenced by the curtailment in the cotton textile, steel and coal industries among others. Automobile production continued to increase during April. * * *

"Industrial production during March was only slightly below February, the seasonally adjusted index receding 1 point to 88 per cent of the 1923-1925 average. First-quarter production was 10 per cent higher than in 1934; with April in-

Byrd Due at Navy Yard at 4; President to Call on Flagship

Led by President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Navy Swanson, Gov. George E. Peery of Virginia, and high-ranking naval and Government officials Washington today will welcome Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, conqueror of Antarctica. The reception is expected to be second only to the one given Col. Charles A. Lindbergh here in 1927, after his nonstop flight to Paris.

The steamer Bear of Oakland will nose up the Potomac today, arriving at the Navy Yard at 4 p. m. She will leave Quantico at 9 a. m., convoyed by the Coast Guard ship Apache, and proceed up the river at her full speed, 6 knots an hour.

At Quantico yesterday Byrd kept close to his quarters, seeing only his brother, Senator Harry Flood Byrd.

"I spent an hour with Dick," Senator Byrd reported. "He seemed to be in fine spirits."

As the Bear nears the Navy Yard today, cannon will rumble a 13-gun salute to the commander of the second Antarctic expedition, who planted the Stars and Stripes on polar wastes, and made them Little America.

Gov. Peery and six members of the Virginia Legislature will greet Admiral Byrd at the Navy Yard at 4:30 p. m. At 4:40 p. m., Secretary Swanson and Admiral William A. Standley, chief of naval operations, will arrive with a joint congressional committee. Nineteen-gun salutes will mark the arrival of Secretary Swanson and Gov. Peery.

Ten minutes later, President Roosevelt will step from his automobile and welcome Admiral Byrd and the men who spent 14 bitter months on the Antarctic ice barriers with their commander. The President first will board the Bear and then return to the Sequoia. Later Admiral Byrd will formally return the President's visit aboard the Sequoia.

Chain Letters Hit Inflation—And Go Begging

The Market's Flooded With 'Buck Passers' in Missouri.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Mo., May 9.—Sad-faced men and women walked around in a daze tonight in Springfield, seeking vainly for someone to buy their chain letters.

Springfield's "pass-a-buck" development of the original "send-a-dime" idea was back-firing. Those who got in early reaped some profit; others apparently were left waiting for returns.

The craze which swept over this southwestern Missouri city yesterday from society matron to bootblack subsided because almost everybody had a letter to sell, thus draining the buyer market dry.

"Factories" Fall Off.

Ten chain-letter "factories" yesterday were swamped with customers. Today there were less than five and they waited on stragglers.

One of the scores of notaries who helped certify that the chains were "cheater-proof" advanced a bit of inside informatoin when assured of anonymity.

"Quite a lot of people managed, by pushing their letters, to get their investment back," he said. "Quite a few realized from $10 to $15. But thousands were left holding the bag."

A $5 chain, dubbed "The Pot of Gold Club," and a $3 chain, advertised as "The Cream of the Crop," were glorified developments here on the original dime plan.

The Chain Theory.

The main point was to get on a list, starting at the bottim, give the money to the person heading it, cross out that name and pass the list along to two others.

The theory was that each purchaser's name ultimately climbed to the pay-off position. Springfield's variation of it was to authenticate the lists before notary public and work from person-to-person in the big brackets instead of through the mails.

Postoffice officials investigated reports a printing plant had flooded Springfield with printed letters. Six men were reported operating it, with the name of one of them in the pay-off position on every letter, but officers had not learned details.

U. S. Agents on Track Of 'Send-a-Dimers'

By the Associated Press.

Postal inspectors are being concentrated in cities where the dime chain-letter craze is at its height in search of evidence on which to arrest those who are writing letters so that "the chain will not be broken."

Anyone who writes such letters is violating the law, says the solicitor's office of the Postoffice Department, whether or not they receive any money in return.

The letters come under both the lottery and the fraud postal laws, says the solicitor's office, which reads in part: "No letter concerning any scheme offering prizes dependent in whole or part, upon lot or chance, shall be deposited or carried by the mails of the United States.

"Whoever shall knowingly deposit anything to be delivered by mail, herein forbidden to be carried by mail, shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both."

Another section would penalize any one who "devised any scheme to obtain money by means of false or fraudulent pretenses" with a fine of not more than $1,000, or imprisonment of not more than five years, or both.

Protests over the chain-letter craze are pouring in by letter and telegram to the office of the First Assistant Postmaster General William W. Howes. The protests come both from the postmasters, who are being forced to increase their staffs to Christmas rush proportions, and from private citizens, Howes' office says.

The cities which are feeling the rush the most are Denver, Los Angeles, Pueblo, Colo.; Kansas City, Kans., and Kansas City, Mo.; Tulsa, Joplin, Mo., and Sioux City, Iowa. New cities are entering the list daily.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

PRESSURE politics probably will reach a new high during the time elapsing before the Senate votes on the question of overriding a presidential veto of the Patman bonus bill.

Not even during the hottest prohibition battle, when the late Wayne B. Wheeler sat in the gallery checking off the names during roll calls, nor during votes forced by the highly organized railroad labor lobby, which is one of the most efficient that ever has operated here, was there anything that is likely to compare with the organized pressure barrage now opening up.

The American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Father Coughlin and Huey Long all are in action. National Commander Belgrano has appealed to every legion post to bear down on the White House and on its Senators and Representatives. Commander in Chief Van Zandt, who led the veterans' fight for the Patman bill, has set a goal of 1,000,000 telegrams to the White House to force Mr. Roosevelt to put aside his opposition and sign the bill. Members of the V. F. W. were instructed to organize mass meetings, conduct house-to-house canvasses, contact business and social organizations and make radio addresses in the campaign to inspire the 1,000,000 telegrams to President Roosevelt.

In addition, every conceivable kind of pressure, warnings against future political defeat, promises, and Lord knows what will be exerted on individual Senators and Representatives—particularly Senators since a handful of votes in the Senate will decide the final issue.

* * * *

Though more elaborate, this activity is no different essentially from that previously employed by the prohibitionists, the repealists, the woman suffragists, labor, capital, the people who wanted to get us into the last war and those who wanted to keep us out. It is legitimate and no doubt in keeping with the letter—if not with the spirit—of the constitutional right of petition.

* * * *

Yet a serious question of self-government is raised—whether people should do things in the mass which are highly desirable as individual actions. It is a question which someone wiser will have to answer.

Some 3,500,000 veterans hold adjusted compensation certificates. Counting dependent and other close relatives, this figure probably would represent at the outside 17,500,000 individuals interested directly and indirectly. That is about one-seventh of the total population.

Take Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, who is one of the Senators under heavy pressure at the moment. A total of nearly 1,600,000 votes was cast in the election which sent him to the Senate in 1932. Missouri has 111,706 veterans who would be entitled to immediate cash payment under the Patman bill.

It is a question for him to decide as to what course would best represent the interests of the people of Missouri as a whole and of the Nation. Every Senator and Representative, as well as the President, faces the same problem today. Or should so regard it. Actually most members of Congress turn in whichever direction the noise is loudest. That is the reason organized minorities always have been so powerful in Washington.

Two issues are bound up in the Patman bonus measure.

One is whether it is a measure to pay a just debt. Walter Lippmann says that the provision for full payment now of the obligation due in 1945 is the equivalent of an additional bonus amounting to 4 per cent compound interest until 1945 on what would be due now. The Harrison compromise was an effort to offer cash payment now on the present value of the compensation certificates with an extra premium to those deferring collection. That compromise seemed to please no one and dropped out of the picture quickly.

The second issue involved is the bonus payment as a $2,000,000,000 inflation measure, which would provide the first direct greenback overnight currency expansion seen in this generation.

* * * *

On the basis of the final 55-to-33 Senate vote on the Patman bill, the bonus advocates need four votes to override a veto. For one of them they are talking about summoning Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina, back from the Virgin Islands in an airplane.

Publishers of the book, "Hand-out," which purports to expose the inside of the Government's publicity and propaganda activities, remark that Washington newspapers are "strangely silent" about the book. Perhaps one reason is that Washington correspondents who attend the White House press conferences regularly found the book's description of them so far from the facts that they lost interest in it. Many newspaper men regard the merits of the present system as greatly outweighing its undesirable features. However, there is a case to be made against the vast publicity set-up without resorting to misrepresentation and gross errors.

The White House and the Communications Commission are in a stew over the investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. ordered by the Senate nearly two months ago.

An inside struggle has been raging over the selection of a chief counsel to direct the inquiry, between advisers who want a hard-boiled investigation and those who warn against the inquiry getting into the hands of a Wheeler radical. Former Gov. Max Gardner, of North Carolina finally was selected but refused to accept and the fight began all over again.

For the information of those who are trying to guess when Congress will adjourn, only once since the war has it remained in session through July.

Nothing yet has come of the plan to publish executive and departmental orders in accessible form so that lawyers, business men and others interested can ascertain what the executive law is, with regard to NRA codes and numerous other emergency activities.

After the Supreme Court exposed the chaotic method by which executive officials issue orders having the force of law but make no provision so that it will be possible for those who want to obey these laws to know what they are, President Roosevelt said something should be done about it. A bill was introduced in Congress, and that's all that has happened. Lawyers are complaining again.

Chain Letter Appeal For Wig Brings Hare

By the Associated Press.

Ogden, Utah, May 9.—The effort of Glen Perrins, columnist on The Standard-Examiner, to obtain 1,562 hairs to construct a toupe to cover a slightly denuded area grew apace today.

Perrins sent a chain letter to a group of his friends, enclosing a piece of hemp rope with the assertion that it was a lock from Mae West's tresses.

The response was spontaneous and Perrins has sufficient hair for a choice of a blonde, black or red toupe, together with straws enough for a whisk broom to brush stray whisps from his shoulders.

He also received a real, live, brown hare.

NRA Working On a Simplified Control System

Code Revision Program Is Under Way, Anticipating an Extension.

By Felix Bruner.

A greatly simplified NRA with a new conception of enforcement and considerable changes in codes is rapidly being worked out in anticipation of extension of the recovery act, Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, revealed yesterday.

Instead of waiting until the new law is passed—if it is—the recovery administration is going ahead with details of what will amount to a new conception of its functions. All activities are being pointed to the enormous task of rewriting and simplifying codes. The program was characterized by Mr. Richberg as the "third phase" of the recovery plan. The first was code making, the second enforcement, and the third will be code revision.

Provisions of Plan.

Included in the plan, if it does not conflict with congressional action, will be:

Elimination of industries not in interstate commerce or "substantially affecting interstate commerce."

Enforcement through Federal Trade Commission "cease and desist" orders of all but major code violations. Such enforcement now is possible only through court action.

Consolidation of many minor industries under a "master code", with slight amendments to affect particular situations.

Use of the Blue Eagle merely as a symbol of compliance rather than as a threat. Mr. Richberg said it is expected that the Blue Eagle would not be removed except for serious code or law violation. In the past numerous Eagles have been removed for minor offenses.

"The new NRA is rapidly taking shape on the assumption that there will be an extension of the law," Mr. Richberg said. "If Congress passes the bill as late as June 1, code revision will be a tremendous job. We can only assume extension of the law and go ahead on that basis now."

Code Revision Speeded.

Mr. Richberg said that NRA personnel is being shifted now to the job of code revision.

The first job, the NIRB chairman said, will be a definition of industry to be covered by codes. He said this would involve elimination of overlapping codes and of conflict in codes and the determination of which businesses come within the Federal power. He said the work is progressing on the assumption that the NRA will be definitely limited to those businesses coming within the definition of interstate commerce. He pointed out that the present law permits codification of any business, but that enforcement is limited to businesses in interstate commerce.

"We very much desire a mandate from Congress to make clear where our power lies," he said.

The second consideration, he said, will be given to code enforcement.

"We must draw a line between self-governing activities and compulsory activities, which can only be carried on by public officials," he said. "There is every reason to encourage trade associations to carry on private activities, but all public control must be in the hands of public officials. Prosecutions for violation must be conducted exclusively by the Federal Government."

Two Classifications.

Mr. Richberg said he felt the term "code authority" is a misnomer, and that the groups should be called "code committees."

"The present term," he said, "assumes compulsion, which should be a Government function."

Mr. Richberg placed code provisions in two classifications: labor practices and trade practices.

Under labor practices, he classified wages, hours, child labor provisions, and Section 7(a).

He divided trade practices into several classifications. In the first he listed such unfair practices as fraud, bribery and false advertising. He said violations of provisions prohibiting these things should be prosecuted through the courts.

In the second classification he listed loss leader sales, markups, discounts and production limitations. He characterized these provisions as those that may be proposed by a majority of the industry, but not necessarily approved by all. Violation of such provisions, he suggested, should be handled through the Federal Trade Commission, "providing for an orderly procedure and not subjecting parties to penalty until the law is defined in each case." This would not involve immediate removal of the Blue Eagle, as has been the practice in the past.

Simplified Enforcement.

"Enforcement policies would be simplified," he said. "Penalties would be limited to violation of labor provisions and the first group of trade practices."

He said the next task would be simplification of codes themselves to prevent overlapping and to eliminate unfair competition caused by conflicting code provisions.

Asked concerning the resolution criticizing NRA recently adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Mr. Richberg said he did not quite understand the resolution, but he believed it advocated "a voluntary code imposed upon everyone who doesn't agree to it."

Mr. Richberg said that the actual work of rewriting codes could not begin until the law is passed. He said this probably will involve public hearings on most of the codes. The procedure will resemble, to some extent, the early days of the Blue Eagle, when the original codes were being written.

"We are laying things down tentatively so we can move more rapidly when the law is passed," he said.

Consent of All Sends Connery Bill to House

Author Will Seek Early Action on Labor Relations Measure.

The Connery labor relations bill, a companion measure to the Wagner labor bill reported favorably to the Senate several days ago, was reported to the House yesterday by a unanimous vote of the House Labor Committee.

Both the Connery and Wagner bills provide for the creation of a new National Labor Relations Board. The only difference between the two measures is that the Connery bill puts the board under the Department of Labor, while the Wagner bill would make it an independent agency.

In making the report, Chairman William P. Connery, jr. (Democrat), Massachusetts, announced he will go before the Rules Committee next week to ask for a rule permitting early action in the House.

Thus far President Roosevelt has failed to make known his stand on the Wagner-Connery proposal, but intimations have come recently that the Administration may not oppose it. Both bills are designed to outlaw the so-called company-dominated union, while the National Labor Board would serve as a "Supreme Court" for labor.

Meanwhile, workmen's compensation legislation for employes in interstate commerce—including railroads, sleeping car companies, pipelines, airplanes and express companies—was proposed in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York.

"It should be stated," Wagner said, according to the Associated Press, "that the recent Supreme Court decision in the railway pension case in no way affects the authority of Congress to enact workmen's compensation laws covering interstate employes.

"In fact, the court expressly distinguished this function. And the time is certainly at hand when 2,000,000 employes, who can not be protected in any other way, and who constitute the largest unitary group thus far neglected, should be brought under the protective arm of a comprehensive Federal statute."

Attorney General Cummings yesterday disclosed that rewriting of the railroad pension act is being discussed in Administration circles.

Col. Knabenshue Sent to Syracuse

Transfer Follows Criticism of Labor Activities.

By the Associated Press.

Col. Frederick G. Knabenshue, who recently was quoted as saying activities of organized labor were forcing a civil war upon this country, has been transferred from Fort George Wright, Spokane, Wash., to recruiting service at Syracuse, N. Y.

Word of his transfer was given Senator Schwellenbach, who, with his Washington colleague, Senator Bone, had protested to the War Department after publication of the statement attributed to the colonel and demanded some acion against "such activities" by Army officers.

Secretary Dern, in a letter to Schwellenbach, said he regretted that Knabenshue "spoke in such a manner."

"It is needless to state that his remarks were entirely personal and did not reflect in any way anything but his own individual opinion," Dern said. "He has been admonished by the commanding general of the Ninth Corps Area and orders have been issued transfering him to another station. Please accept my apology and regret."

He placed in the Congressional Record editorials criticizing the disclosure, which, he said, were examples of the national displeasure at the "wild scheme."

Senate Group Restores Slash In Naval Funds

$11,690,000 Added to Bill to Speed Construction of Ships.

Moving to speed up Navy construction, the senate appropriations committee yesterday added $11,690,000 to House appropriations for the early laying down of 24 ships under the Vinson-Trammell treaty Navy program.

The $459,606,846 Navy bill carried a total of $100,000,000 for new construction, instead of the $88,310,000 appropriated by the House. The Senate measure meets Navy recommendations by making available the additional amount from unobligated Navy balances.

Keels for two cruisers authorized in 1929, one aircraft carrier, 15 destroyers and 6 submarines authorized in the Vinson-Trammell bill will be laid down next year under the schedules.

To Speed Construction.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of Naval construction, said the department will advertise for bids as soon as the act is approved, and will be ready to begin construction of the ships in Navy and private shipbuilding yards after July 1.

Testimony by Admiral William H. Standley, chief of Naval Operations, and a letter from Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson were persuasive factors in influencing the increase, printed hearings disclosed.

It was notable that Standley's detailed testimony was withheld from the printed hearings. The President, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, recently reprimanded Chairman John J. McSwain of the House Military Affairs Committee for publishing confidential testimony of Army officers, of broad international implications.

Off-the-Record Statement.

The Senate document said Standley's evidence was withheld as an off-the-record statement "concerning the international aspect and of effect of making it optional whether or not construction be begun immediately upon passage of the bill on 24 ships or only half this number."

Secretary of the Navy Swanson's letter read in part:

"The department had planned and the Bureau of the Budget approved an expenditure of $23,380,000 for commencing 24 new vessels in 1936. The House Committee recommended half of this amount, $11,690,000, to the House and reduced the total for construction and machinery by this sum, to $88,310,000.

"This cut will mean a slowing down in the construction of these vessels, particularly those allocated to navy yards. This will necessitate a delay in the completion of construction of these vessels, and there will be a delay in their joining the fleet.

Asks Cut Restored.

"In view of the fact that the 1936 appropriation for 'increase of the Navy' is the first appropriation made by Congress subsequent to the Vinson-Trammell bill it would appear to be a very undesirable precedent for this Congress to cut in half the estimate prepared by the Navy Department and approved by the Administration. It is recommended that the total of $88,310,000 be increased by $11,690,000 to $100,000,000."

As the construction increase voted by the Senate committee was entirely from unobligated balances of other Navy appropriations for the current fiscal year, the actual total appropriations increase in the reported bill was only $1,801,585. Of this amount, $748,807 was for increased pay to the enlisted men.

aid for expert pilots and navigators to steer a course direct enough to hit that tiny islet.

Midway Island is considered the first line of Hawaiian defense toward the Orient. Purpose of the aerial armada's flight hence was considered to be a practical demonstration of the air fleet's ability to speed rapidly into position at Midway, in the event of war.

The mass movement ultimately will involve some 50 warplanes, reliable sources revealed, co-operating with naval surface craft in repelling an "attack" of one fleet unit designated as the "enemy" in these war games.

The 45 ships which left early today included the six huge VP-10 "sesquiplane" patrol ships, which made a record flight from San Francisco to Honolulu last year in the first transpacific mass flight, a 2,400-mile over-water hop. The rest of the planes included a number of smaller newly assembled ships, improvements upon the transpacific planes which, despite their San Francisco-Honolulu performance, barely were eligible for the present arduous test.

The return trip is expected to start about May 20.

Filipino Rebels Worry Authorities

Anxiety Continues Despite Reassurances.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, (Friday) May 10.—Roving bands of Sakdalistas, some of them in the hills only 20 miles from Manila, worried constabulary and police authorities today.

Apprehension persisted despite insular administration assurances that order has been restored in the provinces where last week's bloody extremist uprisings occurred.

About 1,000 Sakdalistas, reported massing in Cavite Province, just southeast of here, "signalled defiantly" at the approach of a constabulary patrol, reports said.

Anti-Sakdal residents in several towns of Ryzal Province notified the constabulary they were forming vigilante leagues to round up 300 Sakdalistas hiding in the hills there.

Army officers began an investigation of the Cavite situation and the constabulary decided to strengthen its patrol there.

These developments came while authorities were marshalling forces to maintain order during the commonwealth constitution plebiscite to be held May 14. The Sakdalistas, opposed to the commonwealth system, demanded immediate independence.

Elgen to Confer On Trolley Order

Transit Company Asks Change in Present Plan.

Moderation of the order of the District Public Utilities Commission ordering $1,500,000 in street car track repairs and replacements is to be considered at a conference between Rileu E. Elgin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission and John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Transit Co. at 11 a. m. today.

Members of the commission already have served notice the order is not to be materially changed. Mr. Hanna in a letter to the commission said the commission order was impracticable. They were just certain concerns which could make the underground conduit required in Washington and only a limited number of workmen capable of placing it, Mr. Hanna said.

Mr. Elgen indicated yesterday the commission would be willing to make such changes as the company might be able to convince the commission should be made. But the commission chairman indicated genuine reasons would have to be offered and sustained before the order was changed.

Toledo Strike Parley Is Set For Tomorrow

General Motors Officials Will Meet Workers in Negotiations.

By the United Press.

Detroit, May 9.—William S. Knudsen, vice president of General Motors, tonight announced a conference will be held in Toledo at 9 a. m. Saturday for negotiations toward settlement of the Toledo Chevrolet walk-out.

Knudsen said the conference will be attended by officials of General Motors, Chevrolet, a committee of workers representing Federal Labor Union No. 18384; Francis J. Dillon, American Federation of Labor organizer; Edward F. McGrady, First Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Thomas J. Williams, Federal conciliator.

McGrady and Williams returned to Detroit today after Toledo workers had rejected company peace proposals by a 2-to-1 vote in a secret election sponsored by the Government. They conferred immediately with Knudsen and Dillon, but left without having reached an agreement for strike settlement, Knudsen's statement was the only one issued.

Buick Workers Stand By.

Buick workers in Flint, whose scheduled "sympathy" walkout Monday was postponed pending the Toledo vote, were awaiting the outcome of Saturday's conference.

The Flint strike, Dillon said, hinges on "the attitude of General Motors. If the company continues its policy of antagonism to the union we will call out all General Motors unions."

The Fisher Body plant at Flint, which makes Chevrolet bodies, was closed yesterday because of a material shortage resulting from closure of the Cleveland Fisher sheet metal plant.

Not to Picket Plant.

Dillon declared the A. F. of L. would not send Toledo strikers to Muncie, Ind., to picket the transmission plant reopened there by General Motors after a three-year shutdown. The plant will produce Chevrolet transmissions.

Jay G. Griffin, organizer for the Mechanics Educational Society of America, which threatened a general automobile strike in March, 1934, announced his organization indorsed the Toledo Chevrolet strike actions and would refuse "to handle scab work."

Fred Schwake, business agent for the Toledo Chevrolet union, said his group would continue demands for a contract with the company for wage increases to 70 cents an hour minimum and other requests.

The company offered a 5 per cent general increase and other concessions, but refused to sign a contract with the union.

"Just Married."

"She was with another young girl and a young man," Mrs. Higgins told The Post. "They came here around midnight and asked for a room. The Colquitt girl and the other girl stayed in the room, but the young man went away.

"That night, the Colquitt girl said to me, 'I have just been married.'

"I said, 'Does your family know about it?' and she said, 'No, I ran away from home!'

"She said she was from Texas and the young man was from North Carolina. The other girl stayed with her for two nights and then left. The young man would call for her almost every day. He seemed a nice young man, and I felt sorry when I saw one leg was longer than the other."

California Shows Cut In Grade-Crossing Crash

San Francisco (U.P.).—A decrease of 3 per cent in grade crossing accidents during 1934 as compared with the preceding year is reported by the California State Railroad Commission.

In 1933 there were 1,847 grade crossing accidents, in which 169 persons were killed and 657 injured; last year there were 1,784 accidents, involving 161 casualties and 644 injuries.

Approximately 7 per cent of all highway fatalities are at grade crossings, but only 1½ per cent of the injuries. About 26 per cent of the grade accidents involved running into the side of standing or moving trains.

Harriman Sees Fast Recovery If U. S. Desists

Says New Deal's Methods Are Holding Up Billions in Investments.

raise business activity and increase employment:

"1. Assurance that Congress will adjourn soon and that thereafter major reform measures will await a real revival of industry.

"2. An international stabilization of currencies at the earliest possible date so that foreign trade may move with less hazard.

"3. A strong assurance that further devaluation of the dollar will not be used as a measure to restore prices.

"4. Assurances of a definite and drastic reduction of Government expenditures after the present emergency appropriations have been spent."

Spending Forecast.

Harriman cited statistics to show that $20,000,000,000 is needed for repairs and replacements to present industrial plants and equipment, $600,000,000 for railroad maintenance if traffic recovered to the 1927-1931 average level, $3,000,000,000 annually for automobiles and at least $100,000,000 annually for the merchant marine.

Home building in the next ten years should require between three and four billion dollars, he said, summing up an estimate that an increased standard of living would put an additional 10 to 15 billions of dollars a year into circulation, employing at least 10,000,000 more men.

"In the face of these figures," he said, "how foolish and futile it is to talk of reduced output and of the 30-hour week. I can easily see a vast shortage of labor impending if the work week remains at 40 or even if it is increased to 48 hours a week. America has a demand for more wealth and a job for every workman within its limits."

Sees Business Sound.

Harriman found that business is now sound with unemployment reduced to between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000, compared with 9,000,000 at the beginning of 1934, and between 12,00,000 and 13,000,000 in March, 1933; dividends up $400,000,000 in 1934; exports up 32 per cent and imports up more than 15 per cent; agriculture improving and banks strong.

Against these favorable factors, however, he placed the fear of Government interference with business, the growth of debts and taxes, the introduction of labor laws which he characterized as unsound, "share-the-wealth" schemes, the utility holding company bill and social security legislation, "desirable in its idealism but unsound in some of its practical applications."

The chief objection of business to the New Deal measures is not to the basic principles, but to the extremes to which they are carried, he said. "The New Deal has attempted much that is good, but it has tried to do too much in too short a time."

'De Luxe Hobo Class' Of Travel Created

By the United Press.

Paris, May 9.—Seeking additional revenue, the French State Railways today decided to capitalize on man's tramping instincts.

They created a "de luxe hobo class" of travel, booking tickets for "hobo rides" in box cars on any freight trains anywhere in France.

Several hundred box cars are being painted white inside and out, to be used as "tramping-camping cars" for 18 francs ($1.35) a day. They will be "rented" to hobo parties of at least six and a minimum of 10 per car, regardless of sex.

The cars are being fitted with cook stoves and hooks for hanging hammocks. If the hoboes buy a third-class ticket as well they can have the camp cars attached to passenger trains and roam the land in style as well as comfort.

Plan Formulated For Peace in Chaco

Several Countries to Form Mediatory Bloc.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, May 9.—The Ambassadors of Brazil, Chile and Peru and the Charge d'Affairs of the United States met today with Foreign Minister Carlos Saavedra Lamas, to formulate details of the plan to invite Bolivia and Paraguay to meet at a peace conference to end the Chaco War.

Afterward it was officially announced the session was preliminary to the formal constitution of the mediatory bloc, which is determined to end the Chaco hostilities.

It was recalled both Paraguay and Bolivia had accepted in principle the plan for cessation of hostilities, with guarantees. The mediators refrained from too much optimism, however, because a score of previous peace efforts came to naught.

Del Re Convicted Of Carrying a Gun

Leniency Asked for Father of Girl in Attack Case.

Lawrence LL. Del Re, of the 1300 block of Kenyon street northwest, accused of carrying a gun into District Supreme Court several weeks ago, was convicted yesterday by a Police Court jury. He will be sentenced tomorrow.

The jury recommended leniency and Judge Ralph Given, indicated he would consider the recommendation in passing sentence.

Del Re was arrested by a deputy United States Marshal when the latter noticed a bulge in his pocket. He was hurried from the courtroom and surrendered the weapon, explaining he carried it merely for protection. The court was hearing charges against Francis H. Harding, accused of a criminal assult on Del Re's 6-year-old daughter.

Del Re claimed that Harding had threatned his life. His arrest brought a mistrial in the Harding case and a later date was set renewal testimony.

Hopkins Flays Works Critics As 'Tightwads'

People Will Not Stand by While Idle Go Hungry, He Declares.

Critics of the works-relief program are those whose thinking about national well-being "begins and ends with their pocketbooks," Harry L. Hopkins, works director of progress, declared in a radio talk last night.

Answering business groups and others who have objected to the plan, he said their philosophy is "Do as little as you can for the unemployed. Cut the costs; don't make us pay."

Speaking over a Nation-wide hook-up, Mr. Hopkins joined President Roosevelt in asking the country for its cooperation in the relief task.

Quoting headlines implying criticism of relief activities, Mr. Hopkins declared "they show where the lines of battle are to be drawn in the political arena."

"Are we going to put a fence around the needy unemployed and tell them they are no part of this country and toss them a basket of groceries once a month?" he asked.

"Roosevelt Has the Answers."

"I don't believe the people of this country will tolerate that sort of thing. I believe their minds are pretty clear on what they want done. I believe President Roosevelt has the answer to these questions. I believe the people of this country are squarely behind President Roosevelt."

Where President Roosevelt almost completely ignored critics of the program, Mr. Hopkins, as the Administration spokesman for the plan, undertook to answer them.

He described the unemployment problem as the "heart of economic and social and political thinking and action."

"We have in this country," he said, "a group whose thinking about national well-being begins and ends where their pocketbooks are.

"They are no more aware of the needs, the hopes and the aspirations of this nationful of fellow beings than the average man is of the microbes in the air.

"They are few, but they are noisy. They have all the known machines for making noise. They sit in pompous conclave now and then and bring forth such ideas as giving the needy unemployed a ham sandwich and letting it go at that.

Asks Co-operation.

"They say all this in ponderous phrases, but it boils down to this:

"'Do as little as you can for the unemployed. Cut the costs. Don't make us pay.'"

Mr. Hopkins referred to what he termed "differences of opinion" among people of the various States with regard to taking care of their needy. He predicted that any individual who "runs head on" into what he said was the attitude of the people in favor of taking care of the needy "is riding to a fall."

In asking for public co-operation, he said:

"The works-relief program is a united attack on the direct problem of modern civilization, and it calls for the completest co-operation between industry and Government—local, State and Federal."

Mr. Hopkins said the plan to put 3,500,000 persons to work is not based upon an arbitrary figure.

He said the names and addresses of all these people are in the possession of the Government. He said the figure will represent the peak of the works program and that when this figure is reached the Government "will be out of the relief business." He emphasized that the Government will expect States and local communities to take care of the unemployables.

Upholds Work Projects.

Answering criticism of the type of work planned, he said:

"We have found out that there is plenty of public work than can and should be done, and we are setting out not only to provide work for the needy unemployed, but to do good, substantial, useful projects.

"Their utility and their quality will be high, and these stipulations necessarily govern the merit of the projects."

Mr. Hopkins insisted that none of the works relief jobs will displace any workers who are now employed in business and industry. He said they will be doing things that would not otherwise be done.

Pointing to the record of the CWA program, Mr. Hopkins told his audience that "you don't need to worry about anyone stealing this money."

Meanwhile, he said, there is a "substantial and measurable recovery."

Mr. Hopkins said at his press conference that work of dividing the country into 320 works districts is almost completed, and that "subsistence" wage scales to be paid on projects will be announced within a few days.

"These things won't hold up anything," he said.

Majority Vote Basis.

At the same time, Secretary Ickes, chairman of the allotment board, announced that the next meeting of the board had been postponed from next Monday until next Thursday. He said more time was wanted to "prepare agenda."

The allotment committee, Mr. Ickes said, will operate on a majority-vote basis. He refused to make any predictions as to when people on relief will actually go to work.

The whole program still was moving very slowly. Application forms were being completed so that within a short time it will be possible for the applications and information division, headed by Frank C. Walker, to begin receiving applications. Mr. Ickes said it would not be necessary to make new applications for projects already submitted, but that additional information would be required in each instance.

will be a gala event, with officers in glittering braid and epaulets, and guns and swords gleaming. The Navy Yard will be open for inspection throughout the day and thousands of persons from all walks of life will mass back of officialdom as the explorer-hero is welcomed back to the Capital.

Addresses will be delivered by the President and Gov. Peery, and Admiral Byrd will repdy. with the entire program going to the Nation by a coast-to-coast broadcast.

With exception of his one brief acknowledgment of welcome, Admiral Byrd will preserve his public silence until tonight, when he will make his first public address since his return from the polar wastes at a reception to be given him and his companions by the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall.

Prior to the reception, Admiral Byrd and his entire personnel, the crews of the Bear and the Jacob Ruppert, will be guests of the Geographic Society at a dinner at the Willard. Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, and Thomas Byrd, of Winchester, Va., brothers of the explorer, will be among the guests.

The admiral has been invited to be the week-end guest of the President at the White House.

Among the first to greet Admiral Byrd at the Navy Yard will be his mother, Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, sr., of Winchester, who has not seen her son since he sailed from Norfolk, Va., in October, 1933. With her will be Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, jr., who greeted her husband in Panama.

Meanwhile two congressional resolutions expressing a welcome to Byrd were signed yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Cool temperatures and perhaps a cloudy sky will greet Admiral Byrd today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. The mercury will stay below 70 degrees and possibly showers will fall this morning, officials said.

France Stands Pat For Gold Standard

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 9.—Louis Germain-Martin, minister of finance, declared today for a balanced budget and defense of the gold standard in the face of a steadily continuing devaluation campaign.

Faced with the problem of finding money to meet a budgetary deficit estimated at between 3,000,000,000 francs (about $198,000,000) and 4,000,000,000 and to finance increased armaments needs, Germain-Martin took time off to assure the French chamber of commerce the government is determined to stand by the franc.

President Garnier, of the chamber of commerce, told the minister "the chambers of commerce are opposed to devaluation and ask the public authorities to follow a financial policy which will destroy all pretext for domestic and foreign attack."

'Don't Know Why,' Says Extortion Plot Author

Tulsa, Okla., May 9 (AP).—Opal Virginia Beard, 16, one of six children of a laundry engineer, made a "don't know why" confession today, Federal authorities said, to a crude $2,000 extortion plot directed at Homer F. Wilcox, wealthy oil man.

"No, I didn't want the money for my folks," she was quoted by District Attorney C. E. Bailey as saying. "I don't know what I wanted it for." Department of Justice agents arrested her at dawn in a vacant house where a dummy package was planted.

Jobless Break 'Hunger' Camp, Charge Runout

Illinois Assembly Adjourns After Needy March to State Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., May 9.—The "hunger marchers," who advanced into Springfield assertedly to see that Illinois' unemployed were assured relief, got orders tonight from their leaders to countermarch home.

The demonstrators, numbering about 500 men and women, were directed to evacuate their camp in an outlying Springfield park and were instructed to continue in their home communities their protests against closing of relief stations, a result of the legislative deadlock over the 3 per cent sales tax bill.

Mostly from nearby mining communities, the crowd gathered here this morning with the announced intention of remaining in Springfield until State or Federal funds were provided to reopen the State's relief agencies.

The legislature, however, adjourned during the day until next week, as is its custom, and Gov. Henry Horner, who has tried three times unsuccessfully to obtain passage of the tax measure in the House of Representatives, left for Chicago.

Calls Officials "Crafty."

"It appears that no good purpose can come of remaining in the city while the Legislature and Gov. Horner aren't here. It seems they ran out on us," said Edward C. Morgan, president of the Illinois Workers Alliance, organization of the unemployed, which sponsored the "hunger march."

"They have been very crafty in handling the whole situation," Morgan said. "A few relief stations have been kept open and a few relief checks passed out, thus preventing a mass uprising of the workers. The time is not yet opportune for a mass demonstration at the State House."

The orders to disperse were given by Morgan and other leaders after conferring with the city officials.

Many Turned Back.

Gerry Allard, local leader for the Workers Alliance, said State police had turned back several truckloads of demonstrators who had started for Springfield during the day.

There had been no trouble here as the manifestants gathered, although police shunted the "marchers" away from crowded traffic areas and the State House grounds.

Gov. Horner before departing for Chicago said efforts would be made next Tuesday to end the legislative stalemate. The bill defeated by the House last night would raise $3,000,000 monthly, the amount Federal authorities insist Illinois should contribute to the aid of its jobless.

At Chicago tonight Illinois Emergency Relief Commission officials forecast that by Saturday all but one of the 102 counties would be without funds as reports continued to mount of suffering and privation.

Only Richland County, they said, would have funds to last longer than that date. Frank Downs, head of the Alexander County relief organization, first to shut down as a result of dwindled funds, telegraphed Robert J. Dunham, head of the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission:

"Relief situation grave. Many suffering from hunger. Wiring Horner."

Gov. Horner continued hopeful that the tax bill would pass next week when it again comes up for consideration.

"The whole thing is so simple," he said, "if we can get a few more men to see the light. Of course, if any violence were to break out, I suppose these men would change their minds, but that would be a terrible price to pay for their votes."

Silver Spring P.-T. A. Session Elects Officers

Blair Senior High and Takoma-Silver Spring Junior Combine.

Election of officers for the Parent-Teacher Association of the Montgomery Blair Senior High School and the Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School featured a meeting of the combined associations Wednesday night in the latter school at Silver Spring.

Mrs. George W. Davis was elected president of the association of Montgomery Blair School. Other officers are Mrs. Henry McCeney, vice-president; E. M. Douglas, principal of the school, honorary vice-president; secretary, Charles Clifford, and treasurer, Robert Collison.

Officers named for the junior high school association are Mrs. George Good, president; William H. Reynolds, vice president; W. J. Marks, principal, honorary vice-president; Mrs. George Cook, secretary, and Ronald McDonald, treasurer.

A committee was appointed to investigate the matter of drainage on the inside and outside of the Takoma-Silver Spring School and demand action on the waterproofing of the school.

The condition of the road leading into Montgomery Blair school from Dale drive was scored and the streets committee directed to bring the matter before the proper authorities.

New officers of the senior high school were named a special committee to urge the completion of the playground in the rear of the school, and also to take steps toward securing a gymnasium and assembly hall for the new school.

Miss Madge J. Reese, of the Department of Agriculture, gave an illustrated lecture on Hawaii. The meeting marked the final session for the year.

Illness of Students Laid to Poison Liquor

Huntington, W. Va., May 9 (AP).—One Marshall College student is in a serious condition at a hospital and several classmates are reported under care of physicians today after drinking what officers said may have been poisoned liquor.

The liquor, officers said, apparently was obtained during the annual student election yesterday. A Federal Alcohol Tax Unit investigator made an inquiry but said he found no reason to pursue the case.

French Take In Reserve Units As Defense Aid

Private Air Groups Also Called Upon; Envoys Leave for Visits.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 9.—France brought private air organizations and reserve units into its national defense plan against German rearmament today and moved for closer ties with Italy and Russia.

Reserve units will be moblized and other organizations called upon, the government made clear. A decree by President Albert Lebrun gave official standing to a "home defense" battalion of artillerymen at Lille and placed it under the war minister.

Accompanied part of the way by a scouting squadron, Gen. Victor Denain, minister of air, left for Rome by plane with his staff to draft the lines of a Franco-Italian air assistance treaty.

Visits Flandin.

Shortly before Pierre Laval, foreign minister, was to leave for Moscow, via Warsaw, he visited Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin, who is recovering from injuries in a recent automobile accident.

Laval will attempt to assure Poland her position is secure despite the French-Soviet assistance accord. His Moscow appearance will be mostly one of good will.

In Rome, Denian and Italian experts are to map the first link in the western defensive air pact proposed in the Anglo-French accord reached in February.

Reserve air units and private flying organizations will be mobilized this year as a part of the government's campaign to improve its defenses. Denian announced the private groups would be called this year instead of in 1936, as previously planned, because of "the danger of a sudden surprise attack on France from the air."

Telescopes Programs.

Denain has pushed a three-year plane-building program into one year, to meet the challenge of Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering's plans for Germany's air corps. He said recently he had practically instituted "industrial mobilization" measures to assure delivery of hundreds of new fighting ships before December.

In 1933, Denain said, the French fleet was composed of 1,500 planes "of the vintage of 1925," and incapable of properly defending the country. At the end of this year, he added, the nation's bombing fleet, now about 300, will be tripled and its radius of action doubled.

French airplane factories, he said, are beginning to reach high speed, and since January 1 the number of planes in the air corps has been increased by 20 per cent.

Laval left for Warsaw tonight. He will attempt to win Poland's support for an eastern non-aggression pact and will assure Poland the mutual assistance pact with Russia is only the first step in a series of such pacts in eastern Europe open to all nations.

Polish officials fear the pact might result in Russian troops crossing Poland in case they are called to aid France against Germany is one of the problems Laval is expected to discuss.

Duveen Joshes With Attorney At Tax Hearing

British Art Dealer Says Mellon Has World's Finest Collection.

veen on the sale of a picture to Mellon the Briton said:

"I thought it was a very low profit for me, but Mellon thought it was pretty high, and finally I gave way one day while we were having lunch."

An attendant pounded for order when the witness had difficulty in making clear that by saying "the obelisk near the pond" he had reference to the Washington Monument and the reflecting pool.

Lord Duveen explained Mellon told him five years ago of his plans to establish a national art gallery in Washington.

"I told him the setting is of great importance. You know you can't see a work of art except in daylight. Artificial light is no good."

The Briton's testimony developed that Mellon paid some $4,000,000 for only six of his several score paintings. Included were the "Cowper Madonna," $836,350; "Alba Madonna," $1,166,000; "Adoration of the Magi," $838,350; "The Annunciation," $503,000; "Venus and the Mirror," $544,320, and "The Crucifixion," $195,615.

Jackson sought unsuccessfully to obtain from Lord Duveen confirmation of the Government's argument that paintings of old masters as well as less rare works of art decreased in value substantially in 1930, 1931 and 1932.

The witness insisted paintings of the type owned by Mellon never did deteriorate in price "like a load of cotton or a tin mine."

Nor would the witness confirm income tax returns filed by the New York office of his firm, Duveen Bros., except to identify his signature. Jackson wanted to prove the value of paintings owned by the company fell off.

Lord Duveen said he did not know whether his New York firm filed tax returns showing it lost $2,000,000 in 1930 and $950,000 in 1931.

"Do you want it to be understood you do not know whether your firm earned or lost money in those years?" asked the lawyer.

"Not Interested" in Books.

"I've never been asked for the last 15 years what I've made or what I've lost," the Briton responded. "I'm simply not interested."

Later Lord Duveen added:

"Much of my business is done on credit. People pay over two or three years. Their accounts range over the time when they can pay. Follow me? If you will follow me, I think it's a matter of bookkeeping. I would suggest that you ask my man—my accountant who handles my finances."

After questioning brought out that Lord Duveen in 1915 bought $10,000,000 worth of paintings for J. P. Morgan, sr., Jackson inquired:

"Aren't you the largest art dealer in the world?"

"I suppose I am one of the largest," the witness answered.

"Aren't you the largest?"

"I don't know the figures of any other firm in the world. You'll notice I hardly know those of my own firm."

Lord Duveen, in substance, confirmed records submitted by Jackson which indicated his firm paid $1,180,000 in penalties in 1910 for failure to declare certain art objects brought into this country. Jackson referred to the incident as "smuggling."

Other questions dealing with controversies between Lord Duveen's firm and the Internal Revenue Bureau were asked by Jackson in an apparent effort to imply that the witness was biased in favor of Mellon, and to attack his credibility.

Frank J. Hogan, chief of counsel for Mellon, was sustained several times by E. H. Van Fossen, board chairman, when he objected to introduction in evidence of many records produced by the Government, including income-tax returns and court records of the Duveen firm.

Discussion of Mellon's national gallery plans figured in both the direct and cross-examination of the witness.

Lord Duveen testified he introduced Mellon to an English architect in hope that the gallery would be built in a manner which would permit the most desirable display of the pictures from a standpoint of light.

"Does each of these works of art need one room for itself?" Hogan asked.

"They're worthy of putting in one room," Lord Duveen replied. "That isn't absolutely essential, however."

The witness said he was consulted several times by Mellon concerning the project.

"I have a sketch in my office in Mr. Mellon's own handwriting," the witness related, "asking just where I would like to put the building."

Lord Duveen was asked whether he recalled having "covertly paid sums of money" to scions of wealthy families for aiding in making sales of pictures.

"Large amounts are given by us for sales sometimes," he said. "All businesses have to pay commissions."

Recently elevated to the rank of Baron of Millbank, Lord Duveen will depart today to participate in the King's jubilee year observances.

Another witness, Dr. William B. Valentiner, director of Detroit's Art Institute, told of again inspecting the Mellon works of art Friday with Lord Duveen in a guarded vault at the Corcoran Art Gallery.

"No other collection of masters such as this has been assembled by an individual in my lifetime," he said.

The hearing was adjourned until Monday.

The Government has sought to collect $3,089,000 in taxes and penalties above what Mellon paid in 1931 while a refund of $139,000 has been demanded by the former Secretary in a counter-claim.

Women's Clubs Urged to Wage War on Crime

Virginians Adopt Report Urging They Assume Quota of Fund.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., May 9.—Participation in local, rather than State or national, politics and the prevention of crime, were laid before delegates to the convention of the Federation of Womens Clubs of Virginia at their opening session here.

Today the conference adopted the executive committee report of Mrs. J. L. Giles, State president, recommending that Virginia clubs assume their quota of the general federation fund, and suggesting $2.50 a member for five years.

Mrs. J. L. Buck, of Richmond, in her report as director, suggested that part of the fund be used for a paid executive secretary. Combination of the offices of State president and director was advocated by Mrs. Buck.

She also recommended that the clubs undertake a State project for accomplishment during the year and suggested for this a scholarship fund, State-wide roadside beautification, library work or home demonstration.

The federation voted to inaugurate chairmen of the junior clubs in each of the seven districts, to be elected at the fall convention of the junior clubs.

Dr. Rolvix Harlan, University of Richmond faculty, addressed the conference tonight on "Germany and the European situation."

Others brought out that Administration witnesses before the committee, including Eccles and Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor, regarded unification of the banking structure as a vital part of the original program. The Hancock amendment, however, was beaten in committee and likewise was shouted down when it came to a vote.

Despite refusal of the House Wednesday to accept his "commodity dollar" proposal, Goldsborough attempted by a complicated maneuver to bring it to a roll call vote.

As was anticipated, Hollister moved to recommit the bill with instructions to the committee to strike out all of its vital provisions. Goldsborough presented his proposal as an amendment to this motion, but lost when the House voted, 221 to 159, to consider the Hollister proposal first.

Recommittal Defeated 260 to 118.

The motion to recommit was defeated, 260 to 118, which brought the bill up for final passage.

Only three amendments, all minor, were adopted. Besides eliminating pensions for Reserve Board members, the House removed double liability for national bank stockholders in the District of Columbia, and approved extension of branch national banks to resorts to meet seasonal needs.

Meantime, the originator of the bill and its chief critic are expected to face one another again today when Eccles testifies before the Senate banking sub-committee in charge of Senator Glass. The Virginian is fighting the bill on the ground it would destroy the Federal Reserve as a regional system.

D. C. Banker Advises Loans to All Worthy

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., May 9.—Banks were advised to extend loans to "all worthy borrowers" in an address before the North Carolina Bankers Association here today by Robert V. Fleming, of Washington, first vice president of the American Bankers Association.

Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, of Washington, said bank deposits had nearly reached the pre-depression point, but added this condition was principally brought about by Government borrowing and not expansion of loans.

The Washington banker struck out against provisions in the bank bill which he said if enacted would in effect create a central bank.

Fleming said the measure, as approved by the House Banking and Currency Committee, would transfer initiation of policy as to open market operations and rediscount rates from regional banks to the Federal Reserve Board.

"In effect, it would create a central bank, leaving to the Federal Reserve banks and their boards of directors only the details of operation, without the right to express an effective voice in the determination of Federal policies," he asserted.

He also expressed opposition to the proposed increased assessment for deposit nsurance.

finally to have turned to the cross for hope in the hereafter.

Crucifixes dangled from the necks of both.

For their last supper Hamilton and Palmer had fried fish, cream gravy, potatoes au gratin, corn o'brien, sweet pickles, lettuce, stuffed olives, celery, ice cream and chocolate cake and dewberry cobbler. Both had good appetites.

Both were calm throughout the day. Palmer was visited by his younger sister and an uncle. Hamilton had no visitors. Yesterday his mother, Mrs. Steve Davis, and Katie Jenkins, his heart interest, spent a half hour with him.

Hamilton finally was brought to a death cell, after a wild chase that ranged for weeks throughout the Southwest and South, because he sent as his emissary an illiterate Mississippi farm boy whom Dallas detectives arrested for no reason other than that he looked like a man should not be riding in a taxicab.

Hamilton skulked in the Fort Worth railroad yards while the lad he had picked up in Memphis after a Mississippi bank robbery bore a note to a Dallas pal asking that an automobile be stolen and delivered to Hamilton in Fort Worth.

Dallas officers found the note and easily persuaded the youth to lead them to Hamilton.

Other tramps in the railroad yard "jungle" fled. Hamilton, cocky and boastful, surrendered meekly. Even then he remained cocksure that "no jail can hold me."

Amazed courtroom spectators heard the outlaw in a startling tirade on April 8 when, after his recapture, he was sentenced to the chair.

"If it is true there is such a thing as haunts," Hamilton cried, "I'm going to come back and kick the whole bunch of you out of bed."

Bonnie Parker and Barrow descended upon the Eastham prison farm in the fog and murk of dawn in January, 1934. They poured machine-gun fire from a roadside ditch as Palmer and Hamilton walked to work with prisoners. The two men sprang to where pistols had been concealed and, firing wildly, raced to temporary freedom.

Crowson, the guard, fell with a bullet in his midriff.

Hamilton, without a leader after Barrow was killed, went "on his own." Sentences of imprisonment for nearly 400 years hung over him. He twisted and turned, chiefly in Texas, but with sporadic forays into adjacent States. He was again recaptured near Lewisville, Tex., a few hours after robbing a bank there. That time, too, he surrendered meekly.

Returned to Huntsville prison, he was tried and condemned for the Crowson killing and, with an appeal to a higher court pending, escaped with Palmer and Irvin (Blackie) Thompson from death row in the prison's most daring break on July 22, 1934.

Palmer was recaptured while he slept alongside a Kentucky lane, Thompson was shot down by an Amarillo, Tex., posse. Hamilton roamed until caught at Fort Worth, April 5.

By the Associated Press.

Joliet, Ill., May 9.—They prepared the electric chair tonight for the first triple execution in the history of the Joliet Penitentiary.

Braced by the consolation of clergyman, John Hauff, 32, of Chicago, and Fred Gerner, 27, and Arthur Thielen, 42, of Rockford, Ill., declared they experienced no fear as they waited their rendezvous with death.

Officials, using the times of their admission to the prison as a basis, decreed they would go to the chair in this order—Thielen, Hauff, Gerner—to expiate the slaying of three men in a running gun battle which followed an attempt to rob the Lenore (Ill.) State Bank last January.

Hauff embraced religion in his eleventh hour. His wife and 19-month-old son looked on as he was baptized in his cell by the Rev. Q. O. Deck.

"He's happy," said Mrs. Hauff, "because he's going with religion in his heart."

Hauff grinned as he bade goodbye to State's Attorney Elmer Mohan, who prosecuted the trio.

Thielen's divorced wife, Mrs. George Adams, of Dubuque, Iowa, burst into tears as she and other friends and relatives took leave of the condemned men.

Four men met death and two were wounded in a series of bloody forays that stretched across three counties as the robbers sought to escape.

Sheriff Glenn Axline, County Supervisor Charles Seipp and Charles Bundy, the bank's cashier, were shot down in their efforts to corner the fugitives. Melvin Leist, member of the bandit quartet, committed suicide after a posse had surrounded them. The condemned trio were convicted of Bundy's murder.

Member Banks Show Minor Changes in Week

By the Associated Press.

The condition of the twelve Federal Reserve banks showed but minor changes during the week ended May 8 in the weekly condition statement, with the principal item of Reserve bank credit showing an upturn of only $3,000,000 for the week.

Member bank reserve balances increased $37,000,000, but this item was more than offset by Treasury deposits with the Reserve institution, which dropped $40,000,000.

Steel Inventories Kept Low by Code

New York, May 9 (AP).—"Many consumers of steel," says American Metal Market, "have redoubled their efforts to maintain inventories at the lowest possible level, because while they are less doubtful about the future of business in general they see an increased possibility, though not a probability, that the steel code will not be continued."

SEC Filings Hit New Gait; May To See Record

Total in First Nine Days of Month Half That of Entire March.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Announcing filing of two more registration statements for issuance of securities, the Security and Exchange Commission yesterday estimated that similar statements had been filed in the last nine days for securities having a face value of $140,000,000.

Registrations under the 1933 securities act so far this month were said to be far ahead of the same period in March, the record month when security issues totaling $281,000,000 were registered with the commission.

Because of a requirement that registration statements contain a balance sheet of the issuer's affairs for the last preceding quarter, the filing of registration statements showed a large decrease in April. Flotation of capital issues, however, now appears to have been resumed and there are prospects that the total for May will exceed that of March.

According to attaches of the SEC, securities with a value of approximately $500,000,000 have been registered under the 1933 act with the commission since March 1. This amount is almost one-quarter of the total registrations under the 1933 securities act since it became operative in July, 1933. The total to date is $2,190,000,000.

Registration statements filed yesterday cover a $15,500,000 first mortgage, 30-year, 4 per cent refunding bond issue of the San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. of San Diego, Calif., and a $10,000,000 15-year secured, 6 per cent sinking fund bond issue of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation.

Registration of the B. M. T. bonds brings to an end a controversy which started last October and at one time threatened to precipitate a court test of the validity of both the 1933 securities act and the stock market control act of last year.

The B. M. T. bonds have already been issued in two installments, but they have not been widely held. The B. M. T. directors in May, 1934, sold $8,000,000 of the bonds to four banking houses—Hayden, Stone & Co., J. & W. Seligman & Co., Lehman Bros. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., each taking $2,000,000 of the bonds. The remaining $2,000,000 of the bonds was sold in equal parts to Hayden, Stone & Co., J. & W. Seligman & Co. and Lehman Bros. last September.

The B. M. T. contended that these bonds were "privately sold" and, therefore, were exempt from the registration requirements of the 1933 securities act. The Federal Trade Commission, which had jurisdiction of the matter when the bonds were first issued, questioned this contention but did nothing to stop issuance of the securities.

When the SEC last October succeeded to the powers of the trade commission under the 1933 act, it issued an order forbidding listing of the B. M. T. bonds on the New York or any other stock exchange. Hearings were held on whether this order should be rescinded. Although the SEC did not publish any findings after the hearing it let its order against listing the bonds stand.

Capitulation by B. M. T.

For a time it was reported that the B. M. T. proposed to seek court action, raising the issue that a Federal commission had no jurisdiction over the securities of an issuer engaged in solely intrastate business. But this suit did not materialize and now, by seeking registration of the bonds, the transit company tacitly recognizes authority of the SEC.

When the registration statement becomes effective it is expected that the B. M. T. will petition to have the bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange where they may freely be traded.

The San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. stated that the proceeds of its $15,500,000 bond issue, together with other funds of the company, would be used to redeem all of the company's outstanding funded debt of an aggregate principal amount of $15,868,000.

The issues to be redeemed are the first mortgage 5 per cent 30-year gold bonds and the first and refunding mortgage gold bonds in four series, bearing interest rates of 6, 5½ and 5 per cent. Thus, the company will save from 1 to 2 per cent in interest payments on its debt.

Principal underwriters of the issue are the First Boston Corporation, H. M. Byllesby & Co., W. C. Langley & Co., Emanuel Co., Blyth & Co., Inc., A. C. Allyn & Co., Inc., Edward B. Smith & Co. and Granberry, Safford & Co. The price at which the bonds will be offered to the public has not yet been determined.

According to the statement, H. M. Byllesby & Co. and United States Electric Power Corporation through Standard Power & Light Corporation jointly control Standard Gas & Electric Co., which owns substantially all the outstanding common stock of the company.

The SEC also announced an extension of time for filing applications for permanent registration of listings of stock on exchanges for securities for which forms have not yet been published. Two or three hundred issuers are included in this class.

Time for filing statements for foreign securities, other than those of issuers in Cuba and North America, has been extended until December 31. For domestic issues for which forms have not yet been published the time for filing has been extended to a date 90 days after the forms are published.

These include certificates of deposit, voting trust certificates, securities of investment trusts, securities of banks and bank holding companies, securities of corporations being reorganized pursuant to sections 77 and 77(b) of the Bankruptcy Act and securities of corporations in bankruptcy or receivership.

Drive to Beat Veto of Bonus Begun by Lobby

Senate this week with more than 100,000 telegrams and letters.

Senate leaders discounted the effectiveness of such strategy. They said they not only looked for a veto, but a White House message expressing the President's attitude in unmistakable language. Much will depend on the strength of that message, it was said. Senators now wavering as to how they may vote after a veto indicated a strong statement, justifying the President's position, might decisively influence their next ballot.

Delay Part of Strategy.

Although House and Senate have approved the Patman bill, it is temporarily snagged on a parliamentary reef. Patman sponsors, themselves, engineered this. Their purpose is to hold up the bill for the time being until they can build up sentiment against a veto, or muster every possible vote to override one.

The first step toward delay was taken Wednesday by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma. He moved to reconsider the final bonus vote. Yesterday he offered two other motions to check a too-rapid veto. These proposed reconsideration of the earlier votes on the Patman and Vinson bills.

No votes could be taken on these motions while business was pending before the Senate. An adjournment of the chamber was voted last night, however, temporarily clearing the legislative slate. This would give leaders an opportunity to dispose of the Thomas motions today, if they decide to speed matters and hurry the bill to the White House. Swift veto action, and a rapid move to sustain it, it was pointed out, would nip in the bud the Nation-wide efforts to drum up pro-Patman sentiment.

Won't Concede Veto.

Although a White House veto appeared inevitable, every presidential utterance having pointed to that end, advocates of the expansionist Patman measure refused to concede it.

Yesterday's White House conference was called, it is believed, to arm the President with all available data in support of a veto stand. Breining, who sat in on yesterday's conference, is probably the best informed Washington expert on veterans statistics.

Both Secretary Morgenthau and Gen. Hines were uncommunicative on leaving the White House.

The Treasury Secretary contented himself with an admission that the Patman bill was discussed. Gen. Hines said the subject of a bonus compromise was not broached at the conference.

Compromise Collapses.

The full text of the President's legion message, addressed to Jules R. Fields, executive secretary of the convention committee, read:

"It is fitting that the members of the American Legion, veterans of the World War, and patriotic citizens generally, should join in commemoration of the first convention of the American Legion held in St Louis 16 years ago today.

"War veterans are and should be interested in the welfare of the country as a whole. Our constant objective is to care for the disabled, the sick and the destitute. American Legionnaires and the veterans of all wars support this national policy.

"I am grateful for the privilege of extending my greetings and best wishes."

A proposal to reconsider the Patman vote and compromise the bonus collapsed yesterday, after Patmanites in the Senate insisted bonus full payment would lose caste through the deal.

This bloc still insisted they would have the necessary number of votes to override a veto. But they were hard-pressed for ballots, as indicated by an effort to hold up the bill until the successor to the late Senator Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico, is appointed. The new New Mexico Senator probably will be former Representative Dennis Chavez. The Patman group claim his vote.

Poll Favors President.

Majority leaders contend that a veto would easily be sustained. They pointed out that a motion to override a veto has never been known to poll a higher vote than final passage of a bill. The Patman bill polled only 55 votes on final passage, shy by four votes of the two-thirds necessary to override.

An unofficial poll yesterday by United Press showed the following 36 Senators, sufficient to uphold the President, will vote to sustain a veto:

Democrats—(24)—Ashurst, Bailey, Barkley, Brown, Bulkley, Burke, Byrd, Connally, Dieterich, Fletcher, Gerry, Glass, Duffy, Harrison, Hayden, King, Lonergan, Radcliffe, Robinson, Wagner, Walsh, O'Mahoney, Tydings, Pittman.

Farmer-Laborite—Shipstead.

Progressive—La Follette.

Other Senators were accounted for as follows:

Noncommittal, 5—Byrns (Democrat), South Carolina; Coolidge (Democrat), Massachusetts; Norris, (Republican), Nebraska; Thomas (Democrat), Utah; Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma.

Doubtful, 4—Adams (Democrat), Colorado; Pope (Democrat), Idaho; Lewis (Democrat), Illinois; George (Democrat), Georgia.

Milkmen Thrive On Competition

IN A system of free competition no business is so big that a little business cannot enter its market and take away some of its customers.

Milkmen, as a rule, would rather have competition than monopoly.

They know that a market divided among established, responsible companies is a healthier state of affairs than a market dominated by one concern.

Of course, it would be possible for a long purse to gain control of all distributive outlets.

It is possible, but it is not at all likely.

The reason is simple enough. With the market strongly competitive, no competitor can afford to let his service run down.

If he had all the business, he could not know how bad—or how good—he is.

Competition may be the death of traders.

It is still the life of trade, as every corporate milkman well knows.

Peery's Daughter Crowned at Fete

First Dogwood Festival Is Held in Bristol.

By the Associated Press.

Bristol, Va., May 9.—Merrymakers this afternoon hailed the arrival of Miss Nancy Letitia Peery, daughter of Gov. and Mrs. George C. Peery, who as "Queen Virginia the First" inaugurated the celebration of Bristol's first annual dogwood festival.

The queen was accompanied from Hollins College, where she is a student, by her mother and her two maids of honor, Miss Jane Merkle, of Bluefield, Va., and Miss Embree Slack, of Bristol, Tenn. A cavalcade of State police and members of the festival committee acted as their escorts.

The highlights of the first day's proceedings were the coronation of the queen and an elaborate nine-episode pageant, in which 1,000 persons participated, under the lights of Tenneva Field. Miss Perry was crowned by former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, of Roanoke.

More than 6,000 people are scheduled to march in the grand festival parade at 2 p. m. tomorrow. The coronation and pageant will be repeated tomorrow.

All Or Nothing.

The members of the Business Advisory Council are no doubt in a mood to sympathize heartily with those unfortunate authors whose opinions are willfully distorted by the publication of excerpts carefully selected to give a one-sided impression. The Council has good cause for protesting against the way in which its reports on various pending legislative proposals have been handled. Publication of its favorable findings on the NRA was opportunely timed to counteract the effect of the resolutions of the United States Chamber of Commerce. But the Council's unfavorable criticism of certain provisions of the social security bill, the banking bill, and other measures has so far not seen the light.

All or nothing should be the rule in cases of this sort. There is no justification for following a policy of censorship in giving publicity to the views of a business advisory body supposed to be impartial and nonpartisan. On the other hand, there is no reason why conclusions should be hastily formulated and released without affording the Administration an opportunity to discuss the findings with members of the Council.

Apparently a constructive agreement has resulted from the "slight unpleasantness" arising out of the political use made of the report on the NRA. The Administration announces its willingness to publish all reports of the Council. The Council in turn undertakes to discuss its preliminary findings with experts in the Government service familiar with the details and the objectives of criticized legislative measures. In that way the danger of misunderstanding and misinterpretation is reduced to a minimum and a franker exchange of views is assured than is possible through the medium of a written report.

A Good Stopping Point.

Not today, and not tomorrow, but soon, television will be a hearth and fireside product. This, its sponsors believe, will be a feat second only to the world-wide transmission of sound through space. In point of view of scientific achievement, this is undoubtedly true. But there are still a few unconverted who will be captious over the use of the word "achievement" in connection with radio, and will rejoice that the practicable perfection of television is yet a matter of many months, even years.

For the radio, with all its tumult and its shouting, is on the markets today as a perfected staple. Its capacities are boundless; its usage apparently endless. And no one can deny that it has accomplished what old-fashioned parents and preachers have been trying to do for years—it has definitely made the home more attractive. In this respect, paradoxically enough, it benefits both its proponents and opponents. The former stay home to listen in, the latter to escape the ceaseless blare in public places. Crooning, not on the menu, has become as inevitable a part of the service as napkins and iced water. Everything from "Home Sweet Home" to "Isle of Capri" is on the house, so to speak.

After spending $1,000,000, the Radio Corporation of America figures that they will have a good start toward making television as accessible to the public as radio. Television's limitation of service in its present stage, it is announced, is "somewhat comparable to what one sees of a championship fight from the outermost seats of a great arena." Would it be irrelevant at this point to suggest that perhaps in that very limitation might lie perfection?

A Quixotic Attempt.

The intrepidity of Senator Glass is again revealed by his determination to press a resolution that would compel his colleagues to stick to the point when appropriation bills are under discussion. There are two difficulties, however, in the way of giving effect to this plan. In the first place, the senatorial inclination to talk seems to be uncontrollable, as Senator Glass himself admits. In the second place, it is by no means easy to decide what is relevant and what is irrelevant in a debate on any question, whether relating to appropriations or some other subject.

What is to prevent Senator Long from reading endless passages from the Scriptures to support his "share the wealth" program, during a debate on work relief appropriations? To the senior Senator from Virginia the citations may seem irrelevant, but the Senator from Louisiana might defend them as authentic arguments against lesser palliatives. Certainly anyone who dips occasionally into the Congressional Record is impressed with the ingenuity with which Senators are able to make a lightning transition from the subject under debate to their pet themes. What device has Senator Glass perfected to detect the transition from a relevant argument to a stump speech or to just plain drivel?

The Legislative Jam.

Congress has been in session for more than four months. In ordinary circumstances adjournment would be expected a few weeks hence. But the legislative calendar is still jammed with important measures that call for searching analysis and full discussion. And very little progress in consideration of these really important bills is being made.

Three courses of action are open to Congress. It might be able to employ steamroller tactics to rush the President's legislative program to enactment in record time, as it did in 1933 and 1934. It could remain in session all summer, in spite of the difficulty of maintaining a quorum in each house during the dog days. Or Congress might decide to postpone consideration of most of the White House's "must" bills until next year. Each of these alternatives has its objectionable features.

One of the most serious handicaps by which the New Deal is now confronted is the sloppy legislation which Congress passed under the pressure of emergency. In several instances hastily drawn measures have been found unconstitutional. Others have broken down in administration. Certainly the country wants no repetition of mass-production legislation. To jettison a large part of the bills the Executive has sent to Congress would be far better than to encourage another orgy of unconsidered lawmaking.

The possibility of Congress staying in Washington all summer is no more welcome to the President than to the legislators themselves. Mr. Roosevelt hopes to minimize the uncertainty resulting from numerous recovery proposals as soon as possible. Moreover, so long as Congress remains on the job he will not be free to devote himself to the new public works program. It is apparent, therefore, that a protracted session may prove a drag upon the Administration's recovery efforts.

The most logical course may be to postpone action on some of the more controversial measures. Certainly that would be preferable to enactment of far-reaching bills before Congress has examined their full implications. But continued delay in deciding momentous questions of policy, one way or another, is by no means desirable.

The most serious aspect of the situation is the seeming indifference of the Senate to the tangle in which its calendar has become involved. Last week this body frittered away its time in an indefensible filibuster against the anti-lynching bill. This week has been devoted almost exclusively to flirtation with the bonusites and inflationists.

Aside from routine appropriation measures, Congress has passed only one major bill in four months—the $4,880,000,000 work-relief resolution. It is not the fault of the Senate that several weeks were spent in trying to rationalize that inchoate program. But even since that issue has been settled the Senate has made no attempt to concentrate on the more important business before it. Some decision as to the extension of NRA is imperative before June 16. Likewise a tax bill must be passed. Beyond these essential measures are the social security bill, the banking, transportation, holding company, AAA amendment and labor disputes bills. And this list does not touch upon such desirable legislation as redefinition of our neutrality policy.

A number of pending measures unquestionably need drastic amendment. Probably some of the bills should be rejected outright. But that does not excuse the Senate for failing to face up to pending issues. It should be evident to Senate leaders that unless they buckle down to work on the more important measures a large part of the Administration program will have to be temporarily discarded without any hearing on its merits or demerits.

Warnings To Be Heeded.

When partisan foes of the Administration attack its spending policies and predict disaster ahead if deficits continue to mount, they are frequently accused of trying to "play politics with human misery." When Lewis W. Douglas, former Director of the Budget and an earnest supporter of the President's initial economy program, and Millard E. Tydings, Democratic Senator from Maryland, appear before members of the National Economy League to voice similar fears, their warnings can not be dismissed thus easily by casting aspersions upon their motives.

Neither of these outstanding Democrats descends to personal attack upon those in control of the Nation's spending policies. There is no hint of bitterness or rancor in their impersonal exposition of the reasons for their alarm. They are simply convinced that financial collapse is certain to overtake any country that consistently flouts the principles upon which sound fiscal policies have always been based. Their opinions are buttressed by a knowledge of the disasters which have visited other nations that have ignored such principles.

Mr. Douglas has on numerous occasions emphasized the inevitability of resort to the printing presses, if spending continues until public confidence in the Government's credit is undermined. Senator Tydings also indorses this view. Both urge speedy action to bring public outlays in line with revenues, since neither believes that spending will provide the stimulus for recovery. And, as Mr. Douglas points out, the longer excessive spending continues the more difficult it becomes to call a halt. Eventually, indeed, a point may be reached where it would be politically suicidal to stop outlays to which the people have become accustomed.

If that time should come, Mr. Douglas concludes that the banking system would then be insolvent, since it would be the depository of a large volume of depreciated Government securities. If the market for bond issues should fail, reliance would necessarily have to be placed upon fiat money issues. That would be a long step toward financial collapse, additional hardships for the unemployed and loss of purchasing power for those whose savings would be destroyed and whose earnings would be impaired by an inflationary advance of prices.

Curbing Omnibus Bills.

The legislative hodge-podge popularly known as an omnibus bill may cover unrelated topics or it may embrace logically related proposals which nevertheless call for independent discussion and separate voting. Examples of the former type of omnibus bill are found in the agricultural adjustment act, to which the Thomas inflation amendment was appended, and in the recovery act which created the PWA. The social security bill and the banking bill are examples of the latter kind of omnibus legislation, which is superficially coherent but at the same time embraces a bewildering number of legislative proposals.

With a view to combating an evil which virtually deprives Congressmen of a vote upon many important issues, Representative Christianson proposes to introduce an amendment to the Constitution which would prevent Congress from passing a law embracing more than one subject. Mr. Christianson doubtless realizes that a constitutional amendment is not the most practicable method of dealing with the problem presented by omnibus measures, but his proposal has the advantage of calling attention to the dangers of the present trend. Congress itself ought to take the lead in a move to reform its methods and to discourage a practice which has enabled the executive branch of government to force through hastily drafted, inchoate measures that can not be debated or voted upon intelligently.

A Congressman who is forced to choose between accepting six or seven bills rolled into one, when he favors possibly only a few of the proposals covered, is placed in an awkward dilemma. He must either surrender his right to vote discriminatingly, or else appear to be an obstructionist, because he is unwilling to sacrifice his convictions to gain part of what he wants. It is an intolerable situation, growing steadily worse, and it is well to have the matter brought to public attention.

Quarters For The Courts.

The relationship between the administration of justice and spacious courthouses may be very slight. Unquestionably the most important factors are competent and judiciously tempered judges, and rules of procedure that permit them to function expeditiously. It is nevertheless true that any court handling a great volume of cases is handicapped by inadequate quarters.

In requesting an advance of $3,000,000 from the PWA to construct new homes for the Municipal, Police and Juvenile Courts, therefore, the District Commissioners are taking a positive step toward more effective enforcement of law. The present quarters occupied by these courts are entirely inadequate. Citizens who have occasion to visit the Police Court frequently complain that it is more like a "madhouse" than a court of justice in the National Capital.

Congestion in the lower courts has reached such a point that local authorities are studying a plan for decentralization of petty hearings. Corporation Counsel Prettyman believes that efficiency would be greatly enhanced if minor cases were heard before magistrates in each police precinct. If that plan is to be worked out, it may have some effect upon the court buildings to be erected in Judiciary Square, but in any event the need for additional facilities will remain acute until new buildings are provided.

When vast sums are appropriated for public works they may be profitably used to promote essential community projects of this character. Loans to the District for construction of municipal improvements are especially desirable, for no community in the country is in a more advantageous position to make repayments. And it is doubtful whether any large city is in greater need of permanent municipal buildings than is Washington.

In Memoriam.

On the Death of Bronson M. Cutting.

By Edwin Gordon Lawrence.

Darkness o'er the earth still creeping,
Though the morn was close at hand,
Deep the fog and black the heavens,
Dense the clouds and weird the air.
Hurtling through the somber blackness
Rushed the airplane to its doom;
Pilot Death assumed the throttle
And man's efforts overthrew.

Dead is he, our comrade, brother;
Dead the statesman, soldier true;
Dying, with his song unended,
'Ere his call from life was due.
Death can take but what is mortal;
Live his works, his noble deeds.
And for these, this simple tribute
Place I on his valiant head.

The World's Gone On, Boys.

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Sauce For Lobbyists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article published last Sunday, May 5, in The Post about the lobbyists was most interesting. The statements of the party interviewed clearly indicate that it was intended to create in the public mind that they are a bad lot, and it is expected to propose legislation to regulate them.

While I have not the remotest interest one way or another in the activities of any lobbyist, either singly or collectively, the question arises in my mind continuously—Which is the more reprehensible and more damaging to our country: (a) the professional political demagogues who make all sorts of promises they are aware they can not fulfill or would be most ruinous to the greater number if fulfilled by appealing to the prejudices of the unthinking and unsuccessful in order to get themselves elected to a legislative body or executive position of great trust; or (b) the lobbyists who spring into being in order to combat such people?

As long as professional political demagogues do so, just so long we may expect professional or any other kind of lobbyist to infest Washington. If we label the one we should also put some kind of a warning brand on the other.

JUST AN OBSERVER.

Washington, May 8.

Bouquets And Brickbats.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can not let go unchallenged A. B. Carson's attack on Mr. Bargeron appearing in the May 7 issue of your paper; neither can I understand the discourtesy shown this employe of your paper by the publishing of this communication. I would think that some esprit de corps would be in existence among the writers of The Post that would bar such letters from print.

I am not acquainted with Mr. Bargeron except through the medium of his column, which I appreciate. But if the reverse were the case, I would refrain from criticisms, knowing that people's tastes in writings as in everything else differ, and that there is a place class writing. There are thousands for all manner of clever and first-who can compose and, who, after study of a subject, can produce a satisfying editorial. But only a relatively small group can be the "Court Jester" of a newspaper! Only one in a hundred can by silly travesty and mirth-provoking metaphor expose the inconsistent, unbalanced discrepancies of our social and economic upheaval and get away with it as lightly, as good-naturedly, as surely as does the wise and clever Bargeron.

If he is not appreciated by some, it is their loss. I pity all those so limited in endowment of perceptions of the lighter touch that they pass this column by. Do not destroy Mr. Bargeron's "Gift of the Gods." BORED.

Chevy Chase, Md., May 7.

A READER.

Washington, May 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A. B. Carson writes in "Letters to the Editor" in your issue of May 7 that he does not enjoy Mr. Bargeron's "Along the Potomac."

I buy The Post every morning mostly to read Mr. Bargeron. The Post is interesting, of course, but he tells it all in a snappy manner. I read Mr. Kent, Mark Sullivan, Walter Lippmann and David Lawrence every day, but Mr. Bargeron tells practically the same truths in more frivolous style. Perhaps A. B. Carson just "can't take it." "Mrs. Coolidge Bobs Her Hair" was very subtle. The newspapers can not neglect the public now. Too much depends upon their honesty. Thanks to you, The Post and Mr. Bargeron.

E. G.

Norfolk, Va., May 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under date of May 6 you publish a letter signed "Veteran," which refers to the veterans' bonus and inflation.

You head this letter "Another Little Drink." A proper functioning mind could have found no indication in the letter that the writer might have had either a "little or big drink." Perhaps you were trying to be funny. If so, you missed.

Most of the public who waste 3 cents for The Post know it is the policy of The Washington Post to ridicule anything that they don't know the answer to.

Anyone reading the editorials of The Washington Post will be sure to note that with only two sides to every story, you consistently take the wrong side and when you have no argument that will fool the public you resort to ridicule.

As illustrations take your editorials concerning old-age pensions, workers' security, general relief and the six-hour day. In fact, take any bill for the benefit of the general public and you can always be found opposing it; and in all your opposing you have yet to offer an original constructive idea.

VETERAN.

Washington, May 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of May 7 there appeared a letter by A. B. Carson, who states that he had a discussion with some of his friends and they all arrived at the conclusion that "Mr. Bargeron's mumblings were devoid of either sense or humor."

We can understand that those who belong to what is known as the "New Deal" feel the same way, but there are many thousands of highly respectable and intelligent people in Washington and elsewhere who keenly appreciate the writings of Carlisle Bargeron. This writer has many acquaintances who are good readers, and they all anticipate with pleasure the reading of this columnist. R. LAPPIN.

Washington, May 8.

Southern Women's Voices.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I sympathize deeply with the thousands of law-abiding, broad-minded white women of the South, because their representatives in the Senate are claiming that lynching is a necessary evil to protect their virtue and their homes. These women are supporting the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill because they know that the majority of colored men who have been lynched in the South have been victims of mob violence, not because they have assaulted white women, but because they have been accused of other offenses, many of them trivial and impossible to prove in court.

These women know, and their representatives also know that out of every 100 colored men who have been lynched, from 75 to 85 have not even been accused by the South of what is so falsely called "the usual crime." The so-called "usual crime," therefore, is proved by statistics to be the most unusual of all the crimes for which colored men have been lynched.

Two hundred and fifty thousand women of the Methodist Episcopal Church South indorsed the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill last year. And just the other day the necessity of passing this bill was strongly emphasized by the Tennessee Women's Conference which met in Nashville. These and thousands of other white women deeply resent being held up as the cause for the necessity of continuing the crime of lynching.

MARY CHURCH TERRELL.

Washington, May 1.

Truth Conquering.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your exposure of the plan of some of those sent to Capitol Hill to represent us is what makes a newspaper "an organ in the interest of the people."

This is applicable to your opinion in this morning's Post in re prepayment of the soldiers' bonus. Some will vote a certain way for it, knowing that it means defeat, but they must have some alibi for the folks back home. Keep up the good work, the truth is overcoming slowly but surely, however lastingly.

A FIGHTER.

Washington, May 7.

The Cry Of The Fife.

For two centuries or more the fife and drum provided the field music of Anglo-Saxon fighting men. England's infantry has crossed 100 battlefields to the strains of "The British Grenadier." Ragged fifers shrilled "Yankee Doodle" for Washington's ragged continentals. When Pickett's thin gray line carried the last hopes of the Confederacy across the field of Gettysburg it moved to "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and beardless fifers fell beside Virginia riflemen when the Union line refused to break.

Psychologically, the two instruments interacted to rouse fighting blood as few, if any, other combinations can do. The high sharp cry of the fife whetted individual courage to its ultimate keenness, while the measured crash of the drum maintained the unity of the discipline.

In the first World War the guns played a diapason which drowned all man made music, although the Scots clung to their pipers. The mechanized warfare which we expect to see in the future will have little need of field music, unless some tank battalion takes a calliope to the battlefield.

The Post Impressionist

The Idleness Of Irony.

Post Office, Friday.

NOT even the misunderstood wife is liable to such misunderstanding as the Column that attempts obvious subtlety.

Here were we, the other day, talking with what we fondly believed to be self-evident irony about Dr. Brigance and his fellow speech-specialists and enunciation experts. We recited their slurs upon the slurred vowels of young America—and thought we really slurred nothing of our own ideas. We set forth the parlance-pundits' recipes for unctious utterance—and we were sure that our private opinion of them was as clear as the sun at noonday. Our cheeks ached with the pressure of our tongue.

Yet now comes our good young friend Irgendein Mensch wanting to be told our genuine convictions concerning the issue!

We said that Dr. Brigance and his ilk referred to the radio-talkers as models of perfect diction. We admitted to an admiration for the manner (as well, of course, as the matter) of Alex Woollcott. But then we ventured to wonder whether the Dr. Brigances, on their part, approved Mr. Boake Carter when he tried to utter such words as "entourage."

* * *

And now listen to Irgendein's letter!

"Apropos of your comment concerning Dr. Brigance, may I inquire if you are with us or against us? I make bold to place the inquiry before you on the strength of your remark regarding Boake Carter. You see, I never heard this gentleman essay 'entourage.'

* * *

"I happen to be an American who speaks the accepted words in the accepted manner. That is, I speak as things come to mind without giving any especial thought to the onomatopoetic significance of the words I employ—and, if I feel like mumbling, I mumble. I never pause to gauge just how much breath I must expel in a gust, how much in a trickle, nor am I particularly worried about the tonus of my diaphagm, the elevation of my throat. In fine, when I feel a 'damn' coming upon me, I say, simply: 'Damn!' And I might remark further that whether I stand upon my head or declaim from a rostrum makes no difference in so far as satisfaction with my expression is concerned. . . .

"Well, I grant that there are certain dramatics surrounding such an expression to be pondered.

"But, with a three-score-and-ten expectancy is not life too short to be spent worrying about the next word?

"Every once in a while, I meet something who has read a book, or has taken a ten days' jaunt through England, or who has had the benefit to education at one of our snootier polish-applicators. Invariably it speaks an outlandish jargon, and, when I suggest that conversation could be facilitated by use of the sign-language, what a boot I do become!

* * *

"There is, too, the Com... idealogue to be considered. He claims to be an exploited worker, whereas he is an ass who wouldn't know one end of a shovel from the other; he has a good income. But—and here's the rub — he talks about dictatorship or the proletariat in mincing Oxford.

* * *

"However, I must not extend this list. I shall merely sum up the numerous categories of speech faddists in a single sweeping characterization. If the term is nasty, so's the subject. The term is:

"'Pedant!'

"And you may enunciate as you choose."

* * *

It's an irate Irgendein, you see. Do you marvel that we should hesitate to answer its question—hesitate to tell where we stand in this controversy—that is if we stood beside the "speech-correctors?"

But what we tried to intimate unmistakably in our earlier Column on this subject was precisely that we don't stand there. We stand a lot nearer Irgendein. And our stand is determined by something far more powerful than logic. It is determined by fear.

In all our life, we have known only one speech-specialist who didn't frighten us, and he had merely a single pupil. He was Eugene Wood, who invented the essay in the second person. His disciple was his delightful daughter Peggy, who started on the stage in the 1911 chorus of that "Naughty Marietta" which the films are now reviving. Although Gene's instruction helped a lot toward making her the star of "The Clinging Vine," he was really no more than an amateur enunciator.

What if most people do mumble so badly that you can't hear half they say. Judging from what you do hear, don't you think you ought to be grateful to a mode of speech which saves you from the other 50 per cent?

* * *

The Press Conferences.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S refusal to let Congress have a transcript of his talk to the newspaper boys about the Chamber of Commerce is another example of why he is so endeared to us. Once again he has protected our trade secret which is the popular delusion that twice a week we go to see him and he takes us into his confidence about the problems of the day.

Presumably this protection was in accord with the working arrangement we have with him. In return for the prestige which we enjoy by being considered his confidants we let the White House get away with the stories that he is the frankest President we have ever dealt with, that he never has anything to conceal, that when the boys of the Fourth Estate come in he just opens up and tells us everything he knows, good or bad.

• • • •

At the outset of his Administration any number of publishers' meetings indorsed his "opening up" of the press conferences enthusiastically. This, in itself, they felt was the way to the Utopia. The country was bound to go right if the President was to unburden himself freely to the newspaper boys. That other Presidents hadn't done this was undoubtedly what was wrong with the country.

And only recently at a newspaper gathering a figurative cheer was given to Mr. Roosevelt as the man who had "opened up the conferences."

The truth is, of course, that Mr. Roosevelt has not "opened up the conferences" at all. Just like other Presidents, he tells us what he wants to get out, answers only those questions he wants to answer and does not tell us or answer anything else. We never expect to see a President do otherwise and it is just as well that this is so.

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt has changed the method of our contact, which is more pleasant and, what is quite important, it appeals to our vanities. Under the old system, as is generally known, we had to submit our questions in writing the day before the conference or, as in practice sometimes, shortly before the conference. Now we ask him the questions direct and, calling us by our first names, he answers those he wants to answer and lets the others go by. All of us long ago learned not to become insistent and press a discussion after he indicated he wanted it dropped. Almost invariably the conferences are interspersed with jokes and laughter, and it is not infrequently the case that it is several minutes after the conferences have elapsed before we realize we have come away empty-handed.

This method, while more agreeable and flattering, of course, is not one whit more productive of news than the former method.

• • • •

This is not to say that more news, so-called, does not come from his conferences than those, particularly, of Mr. Hoover's in his last six months. More news, so-called, comes from every department in Washington nowadays than during the old order and the reason for this is very plain. There is more activity.

One member of Mr. Roosevelt's entourage was once unusually frank with me, though. This person had attended some of the conferences to see what they looked like. Incidentally there are nearly always one or two visitors to see the show. This particular person was fascinated.

"I think it's simply fascinating," she said to me. "And the President surely knows how to handle you fellows, doesn't he? He makes you think he's telling you a lot when he isn't telling you anything. And he can certainly sit upon you and make you feel small when you get too aggressive, can't he?" To all of which I had to reply in the affirmative.

If Mr. Roosevelt were to speak frankly and confidentially at his press conferences it would be like doing so at a town hall. Even this late in his Administration he gets a full turn-out of the boys at every show. There is such a crowd that unless you fight your way up front you never see the President. It's like listening to him on the radio.

Three reasons are responsible for his continued drawing capacity. One is that the White House is still a news center. Another is we like the jokes and pleasantries, and the third is we have come to look upon the White House gatherings as sort of reunions. We see fellows we haven't seen for weeks. We go around shaking hands and saying: "Hello Joe, what publisher are you working for now or have you gone with the Government, too?"

The Franco-Russian Pact

Recent Treaty Of Alliance Represents Return To Old Conditions That Led Up To World War—Mutual Assistance Clauses Defy League Covenant.

By Stephane Botchev,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THE pact of mutual assistance now concluded between Russia and France is, if one names it without using present diplomatic phraseology, a real treaty of alliance. As such, it furnishes, temporarily, a certain amount of security for the two states. At the same time it represents a return to the old policy of alliances which led to the war of 1914. And this policy certainly seems contrary to the spirit of the Covenant of the League of Nations, the foundation of which is the abandonment of the policy of alliances in favor of the system of collective security.

The completion of the Franco-Soviet negotiations marks the conclusion of a long and laborious diplomatic and political preparation. During the negotiations for the alliance, which began with M. Herriot's trip to Russia at the end of 1933, two principal obstacles had to be overcome. The first was the internal opposition in France itself against the linking of French destiny with that of Russia. The second was the one which caused the most anxiety at the Quai d'Orsay up to the last few months—the British attitude.

As a matter of fact, uneasiness over the British reaction was very well founded until quite recently, even as late as the time of Sir John Simon's trip to Berlin and that of Mr. Eden to Moscow. Great Britain has always been opposed to the policy of the encirclement of Germany which was implicit in the idea of Franco-Russian rapprochement. It was in order to calm English apprehensions and show that France was not conspiring against Germany, was indeed ready to include the latter in a general settlement, that the project of an Eastern pact was conceived. It was a question of "educating" the British.

The idea was to have Great Britain adopt the Franco-Russian conception of the pact; that is, of a pact including mutual assistance, then to submit the project thus sanctified by London, the Wilhelmstrasse only to have it rejected there, and then, after having thus demonstrated the good faith of the French, to be able to conclude the Eastern pact without Germany—in other words, the Franco-Russian alliance.

• • • •

THE maneuver, which was handled by French diplomacy with the greatest of skill, succeeded to perfection. When M. Laval and M. Flandin visited London in February, the Franco-Russian conception of an Eastern pact with mutual assistance received the consent of the British. This project, which Sir John Simon submitted to Herr Hitler at the end of March in Berlin, was rejected. Thus the way was opened for the conclusion of the Eastern pact without Germany—for the conclusion of the alliance.

As a matter of fact this maneuver had already lost much of its meaning. In England, the repercussions of German rearmament and of Hitler's declarations to Sir John Simon, were such that British opposition to the Franco-Russian Eastern pact, as far as such opposition existed, evaporated almost completely. Today the Franco-Russian treaty of mutual assistance arouses English opposition on only a single point—the automatic character of the assistance. On this same point the treaty encounters serious opposition in France itself. And it must be said that this point is not settled any too clearly, either negatively or positively, by the definitive text.

Until quite recently opposition to the treaty has come principally from without, but the last weeks of the negotiations also showed the force of the opposition from within. It is not at all improbable, indeed, that if a vote were taken today in France on the Franco-Russian alliance the French would reject it. The memories of financial losses on the one hand, and of what has been called the Russian treachery of 1917 on the other, are not yet dimmed. And besides this the average Frenchman cherishes a fundamental distrust of Boshevist Russia. But this is not all.

THERE is also opposition to the alliance in political circles, and even within the government itself. M. Laval personally is not a friend of the Soviets. One must not forget that Laval was the premier who went to Berlin four years ago to seek a direct understanding with Germany. M. Laval has not abandoned this idea. It may be said that in a certain sense Laval is Germanophile, that is a partisan of the idea of continuing the attempt to come to a direct accord with Berlin. Premier Flandin, himself, does not especially love the Bolsheviks. However that may be, it is certain that there was serious resistance within the cabinet itself to the idea of a far-reaching engagement.

Aside from the general hesitation which explains the last-minute interruption of the Franco-Russian negotiations, there was a very concrete difficulty. This was the problem of the conformity of the new treaty with the Locarno engagements. The Franco-Russian project contains essentially three engagements and a protocol. The two states agree: (1) to execute the unanimous recommendations of the council of the League of Nations in case one of them is attacked; (2) to lend each other mutual assistance if the council, after due deliberation, can not arrive at a valid unanimous recommendation; (3) in case of sudden attack, to give each other immediate assistance, while at the same time seizing the council of the question.

A review of the practical possibilities shows why the question of conformity with the Locarno treaties is important. It is theoretically possible that: (1) Germany may attack France. In that case, if Poland remains neutral, Russia will intervene through the Little Entente. If Poland sides against Germany, the situation will be even clearer. (2) Poland may attack Russia. But it is certain that if she does this it will not be without German aid. Then France, according to the treaty, must come to the aid of Russia and attack Germany.

But, according to Locarno, if France attacks Germany, England and Italy must come to the aid of Germany. It is inconceivable that Italy and England will help Germany against France, yet it is not certain that the two states would associate themselves with any aggressive act by the French. In that case, abstention is probable, especially for England, which must always think of the Dominions. But France always wants to be sure of English aid. One may thus discern the stake which is involved in the question of a clause of mutual assistance to be given before or without the decision of the council. Such a clause might cause the loss of British aid for France.

• • • •

IT APPEARS that the solution which has been arranged for this problem reserves freedom of movement for France. The French, it seems, have assured themselves particularly of freedom to give assistance before or without a council decision only after the favorable outcome of preliminary consultation with England and Italy. This is contained in the protocol, which includes also the statement that the two states conserve complete liberty of decision as to the immediacy (that is, the automatic functioning) of the assistance. In the same protocol the two states also agree to proceed at once to the conclusion of the necessary military arrangements.

In concluding this history of the negotiations, one must underline one thing: that the alliance now exists. And one must at the same time note that this alliance, in the minds of the Russians and of the statesmen of the Little Entente (i. e., Titulesco and Benes) is to be the first link in a series of treaties of alliance with clauses of automatic assistance, including the whole of central Europe, the Baltic states and Italy, which are to end in a general convention binding all these alliances together in a system of encirclement of Germany.

But this widening of the system of alliances, if it is successful, would represent a very grave danger to the peace of Europe in the future, and, in the opinion of many, would lead fatally to another war.

Hunters Claim Wolf Ran 50 Miles Per Hour

Springfield, Mo. (U.P.).—If you don't believe a wolf can run 50 miles per hour, you can get an argument over the question any time from Frank Hosey and several other farmers in the vicinity of Rube Rose Farm, 6 miles southwest of here.

Hosey shot the animal with a rifle after dogs and men on horseback had pursued it all one day. The dogs finally chased the animal into a pond, where Hosey killed it.

Hosey said he and other hunters were traveling 50 miles an hour in an automobile down a highway and were passed by the wolf.

That's their story, and they're sticking to it.

Poor Sealing Season Reported at St. Johns

St. Johns, Newfoundland (U.P.).—A poor sealing season was heralded here by the return of the Imogene, member of Newfoundland's famous fleet, from the sealing grounds.

The Imogene returned with 21,000 pelts less than she captured last year and reported the other eight vessels have correspondingly low catches.

Quick As A Minute.

WITHOUT having looked up the article, "Conscience," in the Britannica, I still have a strong feeling that something had better be said about this row of fiction on my table. For odd hours, on many a night now, these books have been taking me from Swedish country doctors to English menageries. And with considerable pleasure, of that curiously refined and impudent sort which books give one in a season when nine thoughts out of ten would lead us out into a pasture to gambol with the lambs. Or, as I happen to have been doing, to lie down in the same pasture with elbows digging into the ground, with a "sling" cramping the upper left arm—peering through the 'scope-sight of a .22 rifle and fussing like sin to get 7 out of 10 shots in a 2-inch circle at 100 yards. "As many men, as many of kinds of spring," as the old Roman ought to have put it.

But "quick as a minute" had better apply first to such marginalia.

It's a curious thing, to take up our muttons, how accustomed we get to the American short story. Of two kinds, you know—the magazine type (a man in a hole, and how he got out of it) done up with direct lusciousness, and the "art" type which flourishes in the "little magazines" and the O. Henry and O'Brien collections, less "man in a hole" than man under 200-power microscope. And if we don't watch ourselves, we're likely to think that short stories must be one or the other.

You'll find it refreshing, then, to take up Charles Wharton Stork's translations in "Selected Short Stories" by Hjalmar Soderberg (Princeton University Press, $2). Soderberg, born in 1869, is the leading Scandinavian writer of the short story. Out of five volumes of these, Mr. Stork has chosen 21. A calm, mature simplicity is the first impression. Here is a mere little sketch, "The Darkness Gathers." Soderberg pencils in a few points about his writing and poetry while he was young, falling in love with a girl of the town—"I pawned my dress suit; I sold my books the few I had; I could have sold my soul"—and then it was over and that was long ago, and an old gentleman beside him at a party perked up with champagne and said, "It's fine to be old. Youth was the very devil."

That is all. But that is quite enough. In all these brief little tales of the parson's cow and the chimney-sweeper's wife and the masterless dog, Soderberg, makes some simple incident so everlastingly true that 40 pages of the handsomest "fine writing" couldn't improve upon it. I recommend the book for those with a touch of indigestion over our own current short stories.

ELIZABETH MADOX ROBERTS burst on the world in the summer of 1926 with her first and full-fledged novel, "The Time of Man." Now out in the Modern Library ($.95), it is handy-by if you missed it.

Read it for a regionalism (Kentucky tenant farmers) which is far bigger than mere local color; for a poetry of phrase and of seeing (as J. Donald Adams, of the New York Times Book Section, says in his introduction, 'poetry in its primitive form—that quality in writing which makes the thing observed appear as if it were being seen freshly, for the first time, with the undulled vision of a child"); for the specific offering of a fine novelist—the creation of a world which never was, perhaps, but which is whole and consistent and peculiarly revealing in and of itself. "The Time of Man" is the story of a girl, Ellen Chesser, who is very likely to become all girls to you.

SOME lighter things now, in quick review. Patrick Carleton's "One Breath" (Dutton, $2.50) is a rare novel in its subject—1785-1885 in the life of the Consuelo family, traditional keepers of a traveling menagerie—and a rare one in its quality. Grandmother Consuelo and the last lion of the old stock died at the same time, capping a tale which is full of the smell of sawdust, of the strain and danger of beasts set off by a family of headstrong adventuresomeness. Vastly good going.

Under the title "Love Among the Ruins" (sired by Browning, and used by John Hyde Preston in a memorable article in Harpers last summer), Elmer Davis gathers 12 of his magazine stories (Bobbs-Merrill, $2). One of our most serious and acute observers of manners and morals in this age, Mr. Davis has the talent to make case-histories of love during the depression into stories which read as easily as rolling off a log, which nevertheless stay with you in their deep point. Here are people we all know, making what they can of their emotions while the heavens fall. Very much worth reading.

"Boarding House," by Peter Delius (Lippincott, $2). A raft of odd characters who board at the same table. Good stretching for those who suddenly find that their friends are all alike.

"Ninth Week," by Irene Alexander (Penn, $2). The gloomy old mansion, the peculiar disappearance of father, and all manner of chilling high jinks on the trail of the mystery.

Grand Opera Finale

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

THE season of grand opera, which closed at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York on the last day of March, was glorified vocally by the revelation of a new star of the first magnitude, Miss Flagstad, of Norway. She has the one essential thing—abundance of voice; freshness and floods of it. Nothing can be a substitute for this. But she also has a gracious and charming appearance, with an unerring dramatic instinct — thus she has all the qualifications for a Wagnerian prima donna.

• • • •

It was a great season for the Scandinavians at the opera; the leading tenor, Melchior, is a Dane; Miss Flagstad and Miss Ljungberg are Norwegians; Miss Branzell is a Swede.

Grand opera differs from the theater in many ways and especially in this; every theatrical season is composed almost exclusively of new plays; one or two Shakespearean dramas, an occasional revival of a former success, and everything else new.

• • • •

But grand opera has to rely on the old masters, Wagner, Verdi, etc. It is very expensive and therefore dangerous to try a new opera, and only rarely is the experiment successful.

Thus, in a review of the past season of 1934-1935, we find that Wagner operas were performed 33 times, Verdi, 19; Puccini, 10; Donizetti, 10; Gounod, 4, and others, still less; all this is one more proof, if any were needed, of the enormous importance of one composer—Richard Wagner.

'Dead' License Plates Valid In Home State

Lack of Uniformity in Registration Date Blamed by Auto Club.

By the United Press.

Thousands of motorists have been arrested annually for driving with apparently "dead" license plates which actually were valid in their home States, Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, said in urging a uniform registration period for motor vehicles.

Henry cited the current tendency to shift registration periods and the conflict already existing between various States.

"At a time when we are urging uniformity in motor vehicle registration," he said, "there is every indication that the country is getting further away from uniformity in the vital matter of the registration period. Motor vehicle operation is becoming more and more interstate in character.

Lack of Uniformity.

"The lack of a uniform registration period has caused much confusion in the past and we may expect more confusion in the future. Hence, the urgency of an accord on a period that will be feasible, practical and beneficial."

In 40 States and the District of Columbia, it was pointed out, the registration period starts on January 1 with varying extensions, days of grace, etc. In Alabama, it starts on October 1; South Carolina, November 1; South Dakota, April 1; Vermont, April 1; Virginia, April 1; Utah, March 1, and West Virginia, July 1.

Five States Plan Change.

Henry said five States "at this very moment" were proposing a change—Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin from January 1 to July 1. Minnesota to April 14 and Texas to April 1.

"One of the biggest jobs our A. A. A. clubs have to perform," he explained, "is to rescue thousands of out-of-State motorists, who are arrested every year for driving with dead tags, while as a matter of fact they are perfectly within their rights."

He said police officers could not be expected to "keep up with the kaleidoscope of changing dates and different registration laws."

National Puzzlers' League Will Meet

Cleveland (U.P.).—The National Puzzlers' League, in case you didn't know it existed, is going to have its annual convention in Cleveland Labor Day week-end. Not only that, it will convene jointly with the American Cryptogram Association.

Members of the two societies are tucked away in all crannies of the globe, according to George Lamb, of Chardon, Ohio, who as editor of the cryptogram association's journal, happens to be in charge of arrangements.

The most active chapters of the National Puzzlers' League are in Hong Kong, China, said Lamb.

Members include all sorts of persons—millionaires, elevator operators, professional men, ranking members of the Army and Navy intelligence services, according to Lamb.

One of the best known of these is Maj. Herbert O. Yardley, who, during the World War, was in charge of military crytography.

Here's what a crytogram is:

"The crytogram is the aristocrat of puzzles. The fascination of puzzling them out is being discovered by more and more people interested in intellectual games," explained Lamb.

"Many newspapers and detective story magazines print crytograms, and I am sure it will not be long before the cryptogram takes the place of the cross-word puzzle in popularity."

THE CAR that has

WON WASHINGTON

The 1935 Ford V-8 is setting sales records everywhere. On May 1st national sales exceeded total Ford V-8 sales for the whole year of 1932. And right here in Washington actual new car registration figures show that the Ford V-8 is this year's most popular car by a wide margin. Ask a Ford owner what he thinks of this year's V-8 . . . Then drive one yourself . . . You'll quickly agree that here, more than ever before, is The Universal Car.

● AT A FILLING STATION
"We don't see you so often, Mr. Bradley."
"Well—I don't have to come around for gas quite so often with this new Ford V-8. It's by all odds the most economical car I've ever driven—and that goes for oil consumption, too."

● MADAM CONSULTS WITH] "JAMES"
"I used to make the trip in an hour—but I've got only 50 minutes today."
"You won't need the 50 minutes, Madam, if you take the Ford V-8. You've got an engine under that hood that'll take you through traffic like 'nobody's business'... And you won't have to slow down for the rough roads, either—not in a Ford."

● 4,000 FT. UP, OVER THE ALLEGHANIES
"Pretty smooth flying today."
"Yes, the folks back home wouldn't believe it if I told them this airplane ride was rough compared to a trip in our Ford V-8."
"You got one too?—Say! that 'Comfort Zone Ride' they give you in this year's job has got to be tried to be appreciated, hasn't it?"

● AT A BRIDGE TABLE
"I didn't realize until I saw your Ford how really smart a car it is."
"Inside or out?"
"Both... And the roominess!... Why there's all that space for bags and still George said there was more room for his legs than in a limousine."

Education Unit Plans Meeting For Tomorrow

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The annual spring meeting of the Education Association of Fairfax County, Va., will be held tomorrow in the Madison School at Falls Church, with Mrs. Elsie A. Davis, supervisor of elementary education in the county, in charge of the program.

Miss Lucy Mason Holt, of Norfolk, former president of the Virginia Education Association, and Dr. Inga Olla Helseth, of the department of elementary education, College of William and Mary, will be the principal speakers.

The sessions will open at 10 a. m. with a business meeting, followed by a musical program by the Glee Club of the Jefferson High School, Falls Church.

A discussion of modern education problems confronting high schools will be held by high school teachers and principals. While high school teachers are having their panel discussion, elementary and primary teachers will hear an address by Dr. Helseth on "Making Education Real."

Another session will be held in the afternoon, during which officers for the coming year will be elected and Division Superintendent W. T. Woodson will outline plans with local high school principals for the next school session. The meeting will close with an address by Miss Holt from 2 to 3.

The Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County will go to Richmond today to confer with State highway officials relative to the secondary highway system of Fairfax County which is under State jurisdiction. The annual allocation for these roads in the county is about $130,000, which is very little more than enough to maintain the system in its present condition. The county board will urge the State officials to allocate at least $200,000 annually for county roads, of which at least $70,000 is to be for the construction of hard-surfaced roads.

Plans for the health clinic for women of Fairfax County, which was to have been sponsored by the home demonstration agent's advisory council and the 12 home demonstration clubs, have been temporarily abandoned, owing to opposition expressed by the Fairfax County Medical Society, it was announced at the quarterly meeting of the advisory council yesterday. Doctors of Alexandria City, who had tentatively agreed to conduct the clinic at the Alexandria Hospital, in co-operation with hospital clinicians, held it inadvisable to carry out the project in view of the opposition expressed by the Fairfax County doctors. The advisory council in turn felt the fee requested by the local doctors to be too high and preferred that such a clinic be held in a hospital rather than in the offices of individual doctors.

Mrs. George R. Bready was elected to the Virginia State Homemakers Association in Blacksburg in August, with Mrs. Florence Jodzies, of Vale, and Miss Edith Rogers as alternates.

Miss Thomas reported that more than 100 4-H Club girls will go to the summer camp on Jamestown Island. In order to raise the $40 which the council has pledged toward the cost of transportation, it was decided to hold a strawberry festival the last week in May at the home of Mrs. J. W. Cleveland at Seminary. Mrs. Myrtle Crippen, Mrs. Mark Turner, Mrs. Marvin Sanders, Mrs. George R. Bready, Mrs. Allan Bradley, Mrs. J. U. Kincheloe and Mrs. L. I. Dolph were appointed to assist Mrs. Cleveland, all Home Demonstration clubs to help.

Mrs. Florence Jodzies, Mrs. E. D. Vosbury, Mrs. Mytrle Crippen, Mrs. J. Hunter Mack and Mrs. J. W. Cleveland were named to plan a county social in the Fairfax School June 15 to welcome the new home demonstration agent, Miss Alice Crutchfield, and to tender a farewell to Miss Sarah Thomas. Each Home Demonstration club will put on a five-minute program. Miss Thomas invited the advisory board to be her guests June 4 to meet Miss Crutchfield.

Mrs. Elizabeth McWeedon, of Lebanon, was named chairman of the committee to collect prizes for the adult and 4-H Club achievement days, assisted by Mrs. Martin Webb, Mrs. J. B. The exercises were in charge of Mrs. T. T. Taylor, of Dunn Loring, president of the Piedmont Chapter, who is now national tree chairman, and Mrs. W. T. Westcott, of Falls Church, Virginia State memory tree chairman. Presentation was made by Mrs. Westcott, the tree was dedicated by Mrs. C. N. McGroarty, a gold star mother of the local chapter, and received by the Rev. Edward Barclay Wilcox, pastor of Crossman M. E. Church.

G. O. P. Committee to Act on Choice for Place on School Board.

Three leading contenders for the post on the Montgomery County Board of Education, which will be made vacant this month by the expiration of the term of George P. Sacks, are being considered by the Republican State central committee for the county, according to Wilton T. Allen, secretary.

All three have strong backing among Republican groups of the county. The central committee probably will decide which to indorse at its meeting Tuesday in Rockville, Md. The appointment is made by Gov. Harry W. Nice, generally on the recommendation of the central committee.

Mrs. Potter formerly was president of the Newcomb Club and has been active in that club and other organizations for years.

The State central committee has indorsed A. B. Jennings for justice of the peace for the Bethesda district, and his appointment by the Governor is expected shortly. He lives at Crestview.

In cases when the official receives a stated salary and fees those seeking that office shall pay 2 per cent of the total of salaries and fees during the year 1934.

All persons planning to enter the primary August 6 shall file their intentions and fee with the committee on or before June 6.

Plans are being completed by the committee for a Democratic rally in the form of a moonlight excursion down the Potomac the evening of August 1.

All candidates running subject to the primary will have an opportunity to set forth their platform that night, Chairman Fenwick says.

A peace drama entitled "The Terrible Meek," will be presented Sunday night at 8 o'clock at St. George's Episcopal Church by the Dramatic Club of the Clarendon Methodist Church.

The three congregations which will unite for this service are Arlington Presbyterian, Clarendon Methodist and St. George's Episcopal.

Best Spellers Are Announced For 2 Counties

Washington, Spotsylvania Representatives Are Selected.

Reno Smith and Vera Knode will represent Washington County, Md., in the area finals of the National Spelling Bee, sponsored by The Washington Post. As first and second place winners, respectively, in the county match they will compete against spellers from other counties for the championship of Maryland and Virginia, in Washington, Saturday morning, May 18.

Reno is a seventh grade pupil in Smithsburg High School, V. Richard Martin, principal. Vera is in the sixth grade at Mount Briar School, of which Charles T. Reese is principal. At the county match, Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Martin presided; Miss Elizabeth Slagle pronounced the words, and the judges were Charles Summers, Mrs. Myrtle Hebb and Mr. Reese.

Bernice Dickerson, of the Robert E. Lee School, Miss Lina E. Sanger, principal, will represent Spotsylvania County in the area finals. In deference to a county school official, in whose family a death occurred recently, no match was held in this county, but the honors are being divided between the two schools entered. One from each will take part, giving Spotsylvania the two representatives each county is allowed.

Montgomery Match.

All the officials invited for the Montgomery County match, in Montgomery High at Rockville, Friday afternoon, have accepted. Miss Elgar Jones, of the high school staff, will call the words. The judges will be the Rev. Lloyd Black, of Rockville; E. M. Douglass, principal of Blair senior high, at Silver Spring, and George W. Davis, of the county board of education.

Details of other matches to be held today already have been announced. Three will be held tomorrow.

Frederick County, Md., will hold its contest at 10 a. m. in the Parkway School, Frederick, with Miss Mary Fogle, of that school, in charge of arrangements.

Spellers from Clarke County, Va., will meet in the high school at Berryville at 11 a. m. Miss Rose MacDonald, of Berryville will pronounce and the judges will be Edward McC. Williams, Berryville, and McKay Smith, of White Post. Archie F. Robertson, superintendent, will preside.

Fairfax County, Va., will hold its match in the Fairfax Elementary School auditorium at 7:45 p. m. Miss Roberdeau Allison, of Fairfax, will call the words and the judges will be Mrs. Carsyon Ryan, Falls Church, and Miss Hazel Davis, of Burke.

Alexandria Contest.

This will conclude the county, or city divisional, matches with the exception of Alexandria, which will choose its best speller for the area finals next week.

Waynesboro, Va., has withdrawn because, through a misunderstanding, its representatives were above the grade limit imposed by the national rules.

Fairview, Calvert County, Marie McReady and Charles Howes.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, Montgomery County, Harrison Fasscer and Bonnie Throckmorton, seventh grade; Jane Chapin and Donald Tucker, eighth grade.

Groveton, Fairfax County, Elizabeth Herdon and Douglas Kerns.

James E. Bauserman, principal, says: "There has never been a better service for stimulating the study of spelling or the reading of the newspaper than the spelling bee has proved to be."

Winners of county matches are being announced in The Post as soon as the official returns are received from county chairmen.

Rites for Veteran Years After Death

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 9.—Clyde Bradshaw, whose body lay in a potter's grave at Bellevue, the county home, for 40 years, will be buried next Wednesday in the National Cemetery at Sharpsburg, Md., with military honors.

The Government will bear the expense of moving the body.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

The Changing Picture

Hollywood, May 9.

THE MOVIES, in spite of themselves, are growing up in one respect. Actors and actresses are looked upon and regarded as human beings and yet are heroworshiped by the fans. These times an actress can marry, divorce, have a baby, or even be in a front-page scandal and still remain a favorite of the make-believe art.

There was the time, not long ago, when the movies insisted on preserving all illusions. A celluloid hero had to be a hero always. A screen vampire shouldn't marry or she wouldn't be able to vamp the men. One good scandal was enough to ruin any player. Movie people had to be good and pure and unreal. We monsters of the press were breaking illusions when we told facts.

* * * *

It is no big secret that Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks considered separating many years ago when they were still headliners at the box office. However, it was out of the question. What would the public say if America's sweethearts left Pickfair? They bided their time.

Now a movie star can act like a movie fan in the pursuit of happiness and still retain his or her glamour. The present crop of performers should be grateful that the picture has changed.

* * * *

MARLENE DIETRICH is as glamorous as any of your favorites of the silent flicker era who had to play the game according to the strict censorship rules. Miss Dietrich came to this country, leaving her husband, Rudolph Seiber, in Germany. It was said that she was under the spell of Director Josef von Sternberg, who brought her to Hollywood. Miss Dietrich was reported going places, in trousers and gowns, with Von Sternberg, Rouben Mamoulian, Douglas Montgomery, Brian Aherne and Cesare Romero—to mention a few cavaliers.

She was seen with several of these gay blades even while Husband Seiber visited her in Hollywood. This would have been unheard of in what sentimentalists like to refer to as the good old days. This behavior didn't hurt Marlene Dietrich at the box office. In fact, she is one of the few big stars who still manage to be a big attraction despite the fact that she has had several bad pictures in a row. The word illusion is greatly overestimated.

* * * *

A screen star can be a mother and still play romantic love leads. She doesn't have to hide her child and can be seen in public with it and even photographed with it. Norma Shearer became a bigger screen favorite after she became a mother, and now, while these lines are being written, she is awaiting the arrival of the second youngster. The birth arrival items are now given to the press freely and proudly. Miriam Hopkins announced that she was going to adopt a baby. Ruby Keeler did it the other day. The picture business has learned that audiences don't hold it against a young leading lady if she becomes a mother.

* * * *

CONSTANCE BENNETT has been photographed with Gilbert Roland at several parties and functions, although everyone knows that Miss Bennett is the wife of the Marquis de Falaise. This hasn't made Constance Bennett less interesting to the movie fans or a better or a worse actress. She took the marquis for better or for worse in private life. Her movie career should and does depend on how good her pictures are and not on who is her dancing partner.

Newspapers and columnists, those with taste, do not print the names of married men or women who may be seen, once or twice, with another companion. But when that actor or actress flaunts a censored romance in public, poses with the person at social functions and broadcasts it himself—or herself—there is nothing for the newspaperman to do but record it. After all, it is news and that's the first four letters of his paper.

* * * *

Claudette Colbert is married to Norman Foster, but the knowledge that she has a strange agreement with Mr. Foster didn't keep the movie fans from liking her in "It Happened One Night." It didn't keep her from being awarded the Academy prize, the highest praise the film industry can give a performer. This could never have happened back in the early flicker days, when illusion and glamour were something to be protected. Today in Hollywood actors and actresses are leading lives which the censors would never pass for screen stories. This section of filmdom, at least, has grown up.

The old-fashioned parent may believe in Santa Claus, but the modern child knows better.

WATCH KIDNEYS SAME AS BOWELS
Wash Out Your 79,200 Feet of Kidney Tubes
Your bowels contain only 27 feet of intestines, yet the kidneys contain nearly 10 million tiny tubes or filters which would measure 79,200 feet if laid end to end. Therefore, it is just as important to watch the kidneys as the bowels. Kidneys are working all the time and are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.
Healthy persons pass thru the bladder 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter. If you pass less than this, your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes may be clogged with poisonous waste. This is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.
Kidneys should be watched closely and need cleaning out the same as bowels. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to wash out your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Newspaper Ad Men Dine at Lotus; Madrillon Bills Cuban Girl.

By Kay Ware.

Tonight, at the Lotus, the first annual dinner of the Washington Newspaper Association for Advancement of Night Club Advertising will be held. In spite of the hefty title, the group meets to spread a little good will, and most important of all, to "rag" Bill Strickland.

It seems that Mr. Strickland's middle name is "Publicity," and the poor advertising men have singly and collectively struggled to do right by Bill. Close runner-upper in the racket is one Al Norton (you may have heard of him) whose sole object in life is to write skits so he can get his name in the paper.

So when the W. N. A. for A. of N. C. A. meets tonight there should be a big time had by all.

Yesterday Sidney's and Max Loew's units met for another baseball battle on the East Ellipse. Score was 20 to 14 favoring the Max Loews. Sidney showed up, attired in a baseball cap, and hovered around the side lines. Barnee appeared during the sixth inning. Poor Marty Rubin struck out three times, couldn't even get to first base. Benny Ratner, Shoreham's sax, was five times at bat. The Shoreham hits numbered 28.

The steamer Potomac is staging an "escort cruise" today, leaving Sixth and Water street dock at 2 p. m. The boat plans to meet Admiral Byrd. A 50-piece military band will furnish music.

Senorita Maria Tover, niece of Cuba's former Ambassador de Cespedes, will step into the Madrillon limelight with Carlos de Vega, internationally noted Spanish dancer.

The repertoire of the new duo includes fandangos, jotas, the "Rituelle Fire Dance," boleros, gitana numbers and "La Reina de Andalucia," a dramatic number culminating in realistic bull fight pantomime.

Hi-Hat gathered enough talent to put on a show the other night. From the Fox—Dave Apollon, Lee Mayer, Isabel Rolfe, James Innes, and Harold Alama. From the Earle—John and Edna Torrence, and blonde singer, Maxine Tappan, who is Hollywood bound. These, with the Paradise Islanders, made an impressive array. There was one sad moment, however, when Alama borrowed a steel guitar, played and sang, and wound up with "Aloha Oe." The poor Paradise Islanders were rather homesick.

To prove that they can perform in broad daylight, the Hawaiians serenaded Hawaiian Delegate Samuel W. King at the Capitol yesterday afternoon.

Guests at the Shoreham were the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal in the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Del Mar for Lieut. Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, of New York.

Show: Eddie Collis, English m. c. and singer; Alma Metcalf, the singing violinist; Agnes Knox, with a fan acrobatic number.

"Sit in the Mayflower's lounge and see the notables go by"—a new slogan for that spot.

For instance—one day, at a table, sat S. Clay Williams with O. Max Gardner, just appointed counsel for an investigation by the Federal Communications Commission. At another table sat prominent members of the American Bar Association and the American Law Institute.

At still another spot was Gar Wood, well-known motor-boat designer and racer. And then Gov. Louis Brann, of Maine, requested a number of Sidney's Orchestra.

The show at Child's Gingham Club includes Harper and Blaine, "Aristocrats of the Modern Dance Classique," Anita Lester, an acrobat; Dotty Rozelle, with piano specialties; Mary Jo Hamilton doing a swell job as mistress of ceremonies; Sammy Richardson featured with Jimmy Santmeyer and his orchestra. The hit number—"Little White Gardenia."

There's a funny bass player out at Glen Echo. He's called "Jumping Joe," and is said to cavort in a lively manner while playing with Daves McWilliams' Orchestra. Do you remember Jerry, the mascot? Jerry still is improving his musical education which is rather good for any dog.

Last week a well-known Representative left his spectacles at Troika, where they still are, locked tight in Mrs. Hamilton's personal safe. Probably thought he wouldn't need them any more because when you've seen the Troika's new show you've seen everything.

And a few nights before that a page one business man left his false teeth neatly laid under a Troika table-for-six. Couldn't leave his hotel next morning until his secretary had ambled over to Troika for them.

A Senator dropped in one night recently and demanded a bottle of very old champagne. "Fifty years, at least," he insisted, and was peeved when Headwaiter George tactfully explained that after 15 years champagne deteriorates.

Mrs. Helen Hamilton, in addition to running the Troika all season, also maintains a home in New York, making fortnightly trips up to see her two daughters, Carol, 1, and Seena, 9.

Alma, the Singing Violinist

Brought back to the Shoreham by popular demand was Alma Metcalf, whose songs and solos are as charming as the lady herself.

Elissa Landi, Actress, Given Speedy Divorce

Says Husband, London Attorney, Suggested She Have Affairs.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 9.—Elissa Landi, screen star, made a five-minute court appearance today, told the judge her husband had suggested she have affairs with other men, and obtained a divorce from John Cecil Lawrence, London barrister.

Before the hearing the county clerk was notified by a solicitor for Lawrence that the barrister had filed suit for divorce in London and contended the Los Angeles court had no jurisdiction.

The actress—who also is a writer of verse and fiction—brought the suit under her legal name, Elizabeth Marie Lawrence. She testified her husband advised her he had affairs with other women and suggested that she have affairs with other men and that the suggestion "hurt me deeply."

Miss Landi and Lawrence were married in London, January 28, 1928, and separated September 23, 1932. She had not been married before.

Naturalist Takes Students on Hike

Nature classes of Congress Heights School were conducted on a nature walk yesterday by Arthur Stupka, Federal park naturalist. The route was through the woods along Wheeler road southeast. In cooperation with Miss Esther Scott, director of nature study in the public schools, similar hikes have been scheduled for pupils of other schools.

Mr. Stupka will lead a campfire meeting tonight at Pierce Hall, Rock Creek Park, which is open to the public. Community singing, a group of Negro spirituals sung by the Battery Cove CCC chorus and an illustrated lecture on Acadia National Park will feature the program.

Million $ $ $ Blunders.

NEW YORK, May 9.

Chase National Bank financed Fox Films and dropped close to $80,000,000, ouch! . . . Lee, Higginson took a $75,000,000 flier in Ivar Kreuger's match factories, and all they got back was burned fingers. . . . Harry Payne Whitney turned Equipoise over to Fred Hopkins, because it was a homely looking colt, but Equipoise won $350,000 in purses. . . . Edgar B. Davis, Texas oil man, lost $1,000,000 in producing "The Ladder" on Broadway. . . . Havana riots cost Cuba millions of tourist dollars. . . . Charles B. Dillingham, now dead, should have made $1,000,000 with "Sunny," but, although the show ran 86 weeks, Dillingham wound up with a net loss of $5,000 (Jack Donahue, Marilyn Miller and Clifton Webb got all the dough). . . . Dillingham lost $313,000 with "Lucky," which ran 11 weeks. . . . William Fox was offered $1,000,000 a year in perpetuity for his Tri-Ergon sound patents by major movie companies (Fox wanted more, the case went back to the Supreme Court, and he got nothing).

Tex Rickard offered Jack Kearns the choice of two contracts before the Dempsey-Carpentier fight—a flat contract for $300,000, or a contract calling for 50 per cent . . . Kearns took the $300,000, but the percentage would have amounted to $500,000!! . . . M.-G.-M. almost refused to sign Maurice Stiller, greatest of foreign directors, because Stiller insisted on a contract for his protege, an unknown actress (Stiller was sent back shortly after he arrived, but they kept his protege, Greta Garbo) . . . Warners decided that Myrna Loy was all washed up when talkies arrived (and look at her now!) . . . The late Willard Mack waived all rights in "Broadway," so that Philip Dunning could sell it, and Mack's generosity cost him a fortune . . . Boon doggling . . . Roy Riegels, U. of California grid star, ran backward in the Georgia Tech game.

S. S. Rex, breaking down on its maiden voyage at Gibraltar, with Jimmy Walker aboard, cost Walker the renomination; cost Curry the Tammany leadership, and cost Tammany the control of the New York Democratic Party (Destiny threw a monkey wrench into the Rex engine room) . . . M.-G.-M. shelved "Soviet" after investing $250,000 in the daring theme . . . Paramount bought "Sailor Beware!" for $100,000, and to date has spent that much more vainly trying to get it past the censors . . . Harry F. Sinclair bought the race horse, Playfellow, for $100,000, only to learn that the horse was a wind-sucker or "cribber" (but the court gave him his dough back) . . . C. V. Cushman paid $70,000, highest price ever paid at the Saratoga yearling sales, for the colt, Hurry On, and it ate a lot of hay but never ran a single race! . . . Every Broadway producer rejected "Cradle Snatchers," but it made a fortune for Sam Howard with Mary Boland, Edna May Oliver and Gene Raymond (then known as Raymond Guion) in the cast.

N. B. C. picked Russ Colombo in preference to Bing Crosby, but they picked wrong (Columbo was to be killed in an unfortunate tragedy) . . . N. B. C. turned down Kate Smith and Morton Downey, too . . . Christy Mathewson, during a world series game between the Athletics and Giants, criticized Rube Marquard for pitching the wrong ball to Home Run Baker (the next day, Matty pitched the same ball to the same Baker, and Baker drove out another homer) . . . After making a fortune for the New York Yankees, the Yanks offered Babe Ruth a $1-a-year contract for 1935 . . . Paramount, fearful that Mae West wouldn't do business in her first picture, offered her a percentage of the gross, instead of a big salary (her percentage went into six figures, and Paramount never did that again) . . . In 1908, the Giants lost the National League pennant when Fred Merkle, after hitting the winning double, failed to continue on to second base (in the playoff, the Cubs won the pennant).

United States Government experts turned down the Browning machine gun at a ridiculous price, and then had to pay millions to get it back . . . "Isle of Capri" was turned down by every music publisher until Max Dreyfus begged T. B. Harms to publish it (it sold 600,000 copies) . . . "Just a Gigolo" was panned so hard by every one who heard it that Bobby Crawford and Rocco Vocco delayed it for almost two years (it was a terrific hit) . . . The Jean Harlow picture, "Reckless," cost $150,000 for music, but hardly any of it is in the picture (Jerome Kern collected $25,000 for half a chorus) . . . In the 1912 Olympic games, Ted Meredith, considered nothing but a trial horse for the great Mel Sheppard, came from behind when Shep faltered and won the 800 meters.

Several book publishers rejected Pearl S. Buck's "Good Earth," one of the ten best sellers of all time . . . Hearst's papers rejected Rudyard Kipling when he arrived in San Francisco with his first batch of poems . . . American aviation experts in France at first refused Eddie Rickenbacker permission to fly a plane because he was only Gen. Pershing's chauffeur (he became one of the greatest United States aces) . . . Marcus Loew couldn't get backing for his penny arcades, forerunners of the picture theaters . . . In the 1921 Kentucky Derby, E. R. Bradley and Trainer Dick Thompson had big winter book bets on Black Servant (Jockey C. Thompson, riding the other Bradley horse, Behave Yourself, nosed out Black Servant and lost his job) . . . On July 4, 1912, at Los Angeles, in the celebrated double knockout of Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast, Referee Jack Welch lifted Wolgast to his feet and counted out Rivers.

Torch Murderers' Victim Identified

By the United Press.

Boston, May 9.—The victim of the Hudson torch murder was identified late today as Daniel M. Crowley, 50, of Boston, a freight lumper for the New Haven Railroad. It was this unsuspecting and intoxicated laborer, said State detectives, whom Frank Di Stasio, 216-pound Revere candy maker, and his son, Anthony, 23, have confessed to kidnaping and cremating in a plot to steal $12,500 insurance.

Identification was established through four keys and a notebook found in ruins of Di Stasio's automobile, in which Crowley was beaten with a crowbar, doused with gasoline and burned to death at desolate Lake Boone in Hudson. A picture of the victim, found in his West End lodging, was shown the elder Di Stasio in his cell at East Cambridge jail tonight.

"That's the man," the father exclaimed.

Being a mere man, we are firmly convinced that if Madame la Ritzy, the Social Leader, were to become absent minded and put her evening gown on backward, it would be hailed immediately as a New Fashion . . . for how else could some of these Paris creations get that way? We still think that these new slit-skirts happened just because some clumsy dressmaker cut the wrong place. And most men agree with us: they don't care a whoop about the New Fashions . . . unless, of course, some pretty girl is wearing them.

But Virginia Lee Warren just sniffs, "Oh, you men!" and condescendingly explains the importance of Fashion to us. Virginia Lee is the Fashion Editor of The Washington Post, and she can pronounce ensemble "on-sombl" without batting an eye. She's teddibly, teddibly smart, and she knows whether the dresses next Fall will have ruffles or flounces, and she can forecast waistlines with more accuracy than the AAA's slide-rule experts can predict a corn-crop.

"Fashion," she explains, "is, after Men, the greatest interest in a woman's life. It means keeping in style. It means wearing the right thing at the right place. It means . . . oh, you're a man and wouldn't understand, anyway!"

Maybe she's right . . . women so often are, darn 'em. Maybe the the problem of a new hat is more important than the fate of the NRA. Anyway, Mrs. Zilch has a miserable time at the country club dance if her new gown is not absolutely de rigeur, and Miss Smith bungles her dictation if her new Summer outfit is not a later style than that thing the other typist wore down to the office yesterday. That's why the ladies turn to the woman's pages of The Washington Post and study Virginia Lee Warren's fashion column. You see, they have to know what They're Wearing This Season and they have learned that Miss Warren's advice is absolutely necessary. Then, on Sundays, they read Miss Warren's fashion page, which gives many hints on the new frocks and coats and shoes and hats in smart Washington shops. Virginia Lee is a friendly beacon in that woman's world which revolves around the dressmakers.

We men can't understand Dame Fashion . . . but we like to see the ladies well dressed . . . and the ladies know it. And, whether they select their clothes to please the men, or themselves, or to lord it over other women, they'll be well dressed if they follow the advice of Virginia Lee Warren in

The Washington Post.

2 Receptions Keep Capital Society Busy

Minister of Rumania and Henry Stimsons Give Parties.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society put in a busy day yesterday, for after the horse show there were two large receptions, one given by the Minister of Rumania, Mr. Charles A. Davila, in celebration of the national day of his country, and the other, a garden party, at which the former Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson were hosts.

The Stimsons' party at Woodley is an annual event looked forward to by members of Capital society, for Mr. and Mrs. Stimson are among the most popular of hosts, official or residential. The weather was perfect for the party in the gardens of the historic home where President Grover Cleveland spent several summers while in office.

Mrs. Stimson received alone, while Mr. Stimson mingled with his guests. The hostess wore a frock of pink and black printed chiffon trimmed with pleated ruffles of the same material, and a small black hat.

Among the guests were the former Attorney General and Mrs. William D. Mitchell, who came from New York; the former Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, here for a few days from Boston; Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, wife of the former Secretary of Commerce; the former Assistant to the Attorney General and Mrs. John Lord O'Brian; Mr. George Wickersham, one-time Attorney General; former Senator and Mrs. Atlee Pomerene and former Senator and Mrs. George H. Moses.

The Hughes Are Present.

Others glimpsed were Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts; Associate Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone; Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, Mr. and Mrs. William P. McCracken, Justice and Mrs. Peyton Gordon and Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock.

The diplomatic corps was well represented by members who had been at the Rumford Legation earlier in the afternoon. Among them were the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre Santander; the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso; the German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther; the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Calderon; the Ambassador of Belgium and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz; the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Don Guillermo Patterson, with his two daughters, Senoritas Zoe and Senorita Olga Patterson; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter; the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Valerie Prochnik; the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Mostom, and the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted.

Also present were the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro; the Minister of Iran, Ghaffar Khan Djalal; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With, with Mlle. Inez van der Broeck d'Obrenan, sister of Mme. de With; and the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph W. Close.

From the Cabinet group were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer Cummings; the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Daniel C. Roper, with his daughter, Mrs. David Coker, of South Carolina, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy.

At the Rumanian Legation.

At the Rumanian Legation the buffet was laid in the dining room. There most of the guests gathered, while the Minister stood in the large hall at the head of the staircase to receive his guests. Among those glimpsed were the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. Alexandrovich Troyanovsky; the Minister of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Ferdinand Veverka, with his daughter, Miss Nella Veverka, and the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite.

Others were the newly appointed Minister to Rumania and Mrs. Leland Harrison; Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, wife of Senator Barbour; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon, with her daughter, Miss Alexandria Bacon; Mrs. F. Lammot Belin, Mrs. William R. Castle, jr.; Mrs. Kent Legare with Mrs. C. Matthews Dick, and Mrs. Albert Dewey. Nearby were Mrs. Harold Sims, wife of the Attache of the British Embassy, chatting with Mrs. F. W. Bunker, and the Charge d'Affaires of France, Mr. Jules Henry.

The Baroness van Breugel Douglas, wife of the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, wore a smart black gown trimmed with collar and cuffs of white embroidered linen and a large white hat. The baroness is Rumanian by birth, and with ladies of the staff of the Rumanian Legation, assisted the Minister with the guests.

Stickiness Removed From Seedless Raisins

Seeded raisins used to be unpleasant to handle because they were sticky. But not anymore. Now modern fruit packers lubricate them. Each raisin is well oiled so that instead of being messy it is bright and shiny and stays separate from all the other raisins. Only a gallon of oil, made from raisin seeds is needed to lubricate a ton of the fruit.

Anybody Want to Buy a Duck?

Underwood & Underwood.

Mrs. Marshall O. Exnicios and Mr. Martin Marshall Marston were photographed while enjoying a ride on the duck at the National Capital Horse Show at Bradley Farms yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Exnicios was in charge of selling chances for a ride on the duck and Mr. Marston looks as though he might even like to buy it for further use.

"Billet" Is Substituted For "Ticket" in France

The two English words most in use in France until recently were "sport" and "ticket." Now, however, the latter has been barred from all state transportation business by the ministry of the interior, according to the Paris correspondent of The London Observer. The French word "billet" will henceforth be substituted for the English "ticket." Latest reports declare Paris is not taking kindly to the substitution.

Social Leaders Watch Events At Horse Show

The Morgenthaus Are Guests of Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton.

The chilly, gray skies yesterday morning probably kept many people from the opening of the National Capital Horse Show. However, the early afternoon proved clear and warm and a fair-sized growd arrived for the last classes.

The show got under way at 1 o'clock after many of the spectators had lunched at the cafeteria which members of the Junior League operates in the clubhouse and on the lawns near the house. Tea, sandwiches, frankfurters and beverages were served. Five former presidents of the league presided at the tea table set up under a marquee. Those who poured included Mrs. E. C. Oliphant, Miss Virginia Hunt, Miss Louise King, Mrs. Smith Hempstone and Miss Alice Downing. Another former president, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, was busy with a group of gay people around the camera which made pictures of laughing groups in a surprisingly short time.

Morgenthaus Attend.

The Cabinet's sole representative was the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, jr., who, with Mrs. Morgenthau, was a guest of Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton. Others in the company were Mrs. John Biddle, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Mr. Charles Gaines and Mr. Stephen B. Elkins 3d.

Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Justice Roberts, and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, occupied a box, having as their guests Mrs. Louis Greene and Mme. Domville, a charming visitor from Canada.

Mrs. Roberts wore a smart ensemble of navy blue, and Miss Roberts was in gray, with a wide-brimmed hat banded with bright green.

Senator and Mrs. James Couzens occupied a box with their daughter, Miss Betty Couzens, and nearby sat Mrs. Tilghman Hendrick with a group of guests.

Other Notable Spectators.

Mrs. Mark Holbrook, sister of Kathleen Norris, the author, was a striking figure in a black and white gown, with a large black hat. Others glimpsed in the group of "rail sitters," who are always the most intent spectators at the horse show, were Mrs. John Arthur Hinckley, smart in a navy blue frock with a jacket of blue and white checks, and an off-the-face hat of blue; Mrs. Gerald Linke, in greige woolens, with a small hat to match; Mrs. William T. Mann, in a navy blue flannel suit, with a hat to match and a white sweater; Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, and Miss Louise Chase Myers, a debutante of last season, who has recently returned from Honolulu with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers.

Mrs. James Alexander Lyon arrived to join Dr. Lyon.

Put yourself under the care of the best available doctor.

Go to see your doctor every three or four weeks, so that he can take blood pressure, temperature and pulse.

Follow the doctor's advice exactly. If you do, then he will be able to give you the best of care.

Consult your doctor at once if you have any discomfort.

And plan ahead carefully so that you will be able to take advantage of every facility in your community.

Holder of World Title In Skating Is D. C. Visitor

Winner of the women's title in the international speed-skating contest recently held in Oslo, Norway, Miss Kit Klein now looks forward to the 1936 Olympics. "But after that," says the attractive 25-year-old brunette, now visiting in Washington, "I'm going to retire."

Katherine Klein, Ice Champion, Plans to Give up Competition After the Olympics in Berlin.

ALTHOUGH Scandinavians virtually "grow up on ice skates," girls from Norway, Denmark and Sweden recently went down in defeat against Miss Katherine Klein, of Buffalo, N. Y., who returned from Europe last month with the title of "world's champion woman ice skater."

Now visiting in Washington, this slim 25-year-old brunette yesterday admitted that for the last few years life for her had been largely just one skating contest after another.

Discussing her recent trip to Europe, where she won numerous laurels and captured her latest crown in Oslo, Norway, over 14 competitors, Miss Klein explained that there is much difference between the way contests are conducted here and across the Atlantic.

Run Against Clock.

"Here it's a matter of staying ahead of the person nearest you," she said. "There, your only competitor is the clock. You skate alone, or perhaps with one other person. You're timed, to the second, and the one making it in the fewest number of minutes, after everybody has 'run against the clock,' wins."

This makes the contests abroad less exciting, she added, but also less strenuous. She also mentioned that "it's all done to music" in the Scandinavian countries, which worked in her favor, as she "learned to skate to music."

This is the chief reason, she believes, that her former rhythm and timing) are up to par and that they stood her in good stead in her recent contest, "for form and speed," she said, "are what count most in winning on ice skates."

Taking up the sport seriously at the age of 16 she has been working to improve her form and speed for nine years and now with a national and international triumph to her credit she is looking forward to "just one more big contest"—the 1935 Olympics in Berlin.

Plans a Lot of Golf.

With this in view, she plans to spend a good deal of time playing golf the next three months, "just to keep my muscles hard," she explained. She will begin more intensive training in September, when she will begin paying particular attention to her diet, "but I don't have to bother about that much," she said, "because rich foods don't tempt me." She also will ride a bicycle every day during the training period because "there's nothing like it for strengthening muscles," and she will spend plenty of time in the gymnasium doing calisthenics. All this, besides skimming over the ice daily, "just for the practice."

For the last nine years she has entered so many contests that one was hardly finished before she started training for another. "But after the 1936 Olympics, I'm going to retire," she announced. "No more competitions for me after that."

Did she plan to take up any other sport after "retirement?"

"Not seriously," she said. "Of course, I'll continue to skate, just for fun, because I really enjoy it. I'll play golf, too, but also just for fun. Unless I change my mind, I won't go in for anything with an intent to win a championship."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Here is my problem—clothes! I am 5 feet 8 inches tall, and wear size 40 and 42 dresses. The other day I took $4 to buy a little street dress and discovered all dresses under $7.95 are much too short for me.

* * * *

I do not have the means to buy the more expensive dresses and would like to contact a woman my own size who would be willing to sell me her discarded dresses. I can pay a fair price and call for the dresses.

* * * *

Do you know of anyone? It would be such a help to me. I am only 26 years old.

NEEDY.

* * * *

DEAR NEEDY: Offhand, I don't know of such a woman, I am sorry to say. But perhaps by printing your letter we may arrest the attention of some woman reader who will provide the very contact you are seeking. At any rate, let's try it. Communications, if any, will be forwarded.

M. H.

Question About Eyes.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am one of those women afflicted with eyebrows and lashes several shades lighter than my hair, which is ash-blonde. In order to improve my appearance, and give some expression to my face, I have been having my lashes dyed dark-brown. But recently one of my friends took me to task for this, telling me I was running a risk of losing my eyesight; that this was a well known fact and that I could verify it by consulting any reliable beauty operator, or by reading some of the pubications issued by certain scientific laboratories.

* * * *

Miss Haworth, is this true? Please advise me, and also tell me if the same is true of mascara tinting. I was thinking of having them dyed soon again, so your early answer will be much appreciated. Sincerely,

COLORLESS.

DEAR COLORLESS: A beauty operator with considerable laboratory experience, for whose intelligence and integrity I have the greatest respect, and to whom I referred your problem, says, "there is always some risk" involved in the so-called permanent dyeing of eyelashes, but that this risk is reduced to a minimum if the work is done by a competent, experienced operator.

* * * *

However, with one possible exception, she said, none of the dyes are guaranteed to be harmless, and are applied at the client's risk. The danger, as she explained it, lies in the possibility of infection of the eyelids and eye tissues. Persons endowed with splendid eye-health run almost no risk, while those whose eye-health is below par are not so fortunate.

* * * *

This operator—whose name I can give you on request—defines a competent consultant as one who can safely decide for the potential client whether or not she can afford the risk of dyeing her lashes. As for mascara tints, she seemed inclined to indorse their use with fewer qualifications.

My suggestion would be that you consult an oculist, if you are interested in having an authoritative, scientific pronouncement in the question.

Organized Women's Groups Limit Their Effectiveness By Using 'Pink Tea' Methods

By Malvina Lindsay,
Woman's Page Editor.

WOMEN today in their work for causes seem strangely inept to what they were 75 or even 25 years ago. The chief reason for this is that they have gone social and snobbish.

* * * *

Take the many women's national groups that have met in Washington in the last few months. The leaders of these have with great zeal dedicated themselves to lofty social, political and humanitarian programs. And then they have gone home to spread the contagion of their high resolves through such feeble mediums as Thursday afternoon programs in hotel parlors and at teas in the homes of social Brahmins.

* * * *

Even in their national meetings these groups have overlooked opportunities to blazon their gospel. The recent brilliant and stirring speech on the political spoils system that Mrs. George Gellhorn of St. Louis delivered at the Washington meeting of the National League of Women Voters was heard only by a group of delegates who already were converted. And while the peace group did have the rare good sense to hold one open-air meeting at which Miss Jane Addams spoke, yet the cause of world peace might have been immeasurably helped if the public had had closer touch with the personalities of Miss Addams and the other great women who attended the conference.

WOMEN'S organizations have unwittingly become enmeshed in a social web that limits their effectiveness. They seem to be unable to get their appeal beyond a certain social class. For instance, if a new club to work for some enlightened and democratic objective is to be formed, the first step usually is to draw up an organization committee of influential, moneyed women. Then this little coterie proceeds along what it calls "educational," but what are really "pink tea" methods.

* * * *

Weekly or monthly meetings are held in stuffy hotel parlors and at these half the afternoon is consumed in listening to soloists intone "Hark, hark, the lark," and committees report on plans to hold bridge benefits. Or, if an outstanding speaker is obtained, he—or she—is invariably presented at a hotel luncheon to which a $2 ticket and a new hat are a passport. Even the most serious minded and progressive groups waste a large amount of time and effort in polite social events and in pedantic programs staged for the benefit of their own membership.

* * * *

If these women's groups were consumed with a flaming desire to put across their causes they would buy a few soap boxes and hold some street corner revivals. Or failing this, they would arrange for some 50-cent barbecues with good band music.

WOMEN'S failure to advance in politics has been largely due to their snobbishness in political organization. It is an amazing fact that many women's political clubs are conducted almost like girls' sororities when it comes to membership. Their teas, their banquets, their meetings, their clubhouses are restricted to their own little "better element" groups. Leaders are chosen for campaign contributions and social prestige rather than brains and personality. Like dying churches these groups hold their own little respectable meetings while the unenlightened sinners are left to the demagogues.

* * * *

When the woman's temperance movement spread like a prairie fire over the country in the 70's the blaze was ignited, not by teas, luncheons or pleasant educational programs, but by women holding prayer meetings on the floors of saloons. Fanatics, though these women may have been, they at least dramatized and democratized their cause.

* * * *

Perhaps what the women's organizations of today need are a few Carrie Nations. But even more than that they need a rekindling of democracy in their own souls so that they may reach out more effectively toward the mass enlightenment (true democracy) that is their goal. They especially need to know how to arrange more public mass meetings and fewer teas.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Mallory marries Michael Dale, catch of the town, despite her mother's protests. Mrs. Mallory is furious, because Ellen has supported the family. Mike insists that Ellen give up tennis, for which she has shown real ability, and also stop working so that she can devote all her time to their home. Ellen promises, but becomes worried by the staggering debts her mother has accumulated, and goes back to work.

ELLEN'S husband might disapprove of her return to office work. Ellen's mother did not disapprove. She told Ellen, emphatically, how thoroughly she agreed.

There were times that Ellen grew impatient of her mother's philosophies. "But what if I tell you that I like homemaking best, that I'm just going to help you get squared around on your debts and then go back to keeping house?"

"I'd say you were an idiot," bluntly. "If you're smart you'll brush up on your tennis and you'll go back and show the whole world—yes, I mean it, Ellen, you'll show the whole world what a real tennis star is."

"And what if I told you that I'd rather have a baby than win a dozen tournaments?"

Mother Was Angry.

Rose Mallory sat down suddenly. "Ellen, what do you mean? You don't mean that, that——"

That same look on her mother's face that she had caught on Mrs. Benson's. "Why no, not now. But why not, mother?"

"Why not? Why not?" Her mother was almost incoherent in her wrath. "Settle down to having babies when you have the talent to be really famous, Ellen Mallory, it would be nothing short of disastrous. That's just what it would be. Nothing short of disastrous."

"Well, don't worry," Ellen had said. "I've got a job now. I'll have my hands full taking care of that."

"And if you enter the next tournament you'll have to brush up on your game."

"Yes. I'll have to brush up on my game," Ellen agreed. But the thought held little happiness. Somehow the joy had gone from much of living these days.

To begin with, it wasn't quite so easy to keep house and to work as she thought it would be. Mike had to be at work early. Her own day's work began at nine. That is, her office work. But there had been at least two hours' work to precede that. Their breakfast. The hasty clearing away of the dishes and then plans for the evening meal.

Usually she could leave the office at five. That gave barely time for rapid dash home and the hurried preparation of the evening meal.

Party Planned.

But there were days in which the work was not so easily accomplished. The night, for instance, of Kathleen Work's picnic. A group of the young women had planned a picnic and a later attendance at the flower show.

Ellen was pleased. It was almost the first get-together of the old group since Ellen's marriage. It would be fun to attend the picnic with her handsome husband and later the flower show.

But that was the night, of all nights, that Mr. and Mrs. Benson chose for what they called a "get-together" on the rental list.

Ellen held her breath as she heard them discuss it. Would they need her?

The decision was inevitable. They would need her.

She telephoned Michael when she got a chance. "I'm sorry, Mike, but it's the only night they seem to have. I'll have to stay."

Mike was always so reasonable. His voice held little disappointment. "I'll give up the picnic, too, then. I really don't care much about it."

"Oh, but you must go, dear. Someone will have to go and take the cake I baked. It's all ready in the covered cake container. Just put it in the car that way. And there are some olives and pickles in the icebox."

"All right," Mike said without too much hesitation. "Sorry you won't be along, Ellen."

"I'll be O. K.," Ellen said, relieved and yet sorry, and went back to her work.

They passed her corner later, tooting and waving wildly. Ellen hurried to the window to wave at them for an instant. There were three cars loaded.

But Michael's roadster was not in the small procession. Perhaps he had decided, after all, not to go, or, since his car was single seated, perhaps he had left it behind and was riding with the others.

Saw Mike's Car.

She leaned out to see. But she couldn't see from above even though they were leaning out to wave. And just as she was about to turn from the window she saw Mike's car rapidly following the others. He was alone? No, there was someone else in the car. A girl was with him. Yes, there were two in the car. Ellen could tell that. She caught the flutter of a bright scarf.

Her eyes could not tell it, but in her heart Ellen Dale knew that the girl who rode in the car with Mike was Marjorie Hutton.

After what seemed hours, they drove home. Mr. and Mrs. Benson in the front seat of the car, Ellen sitting primly in the back seat alone. She had hoped there might be a light in the little house. There was none.

Tried to Read.

Ellen looked at her wrist watch. Exactly 12.

She tried sitting up and reading, to wait for him. But her head ached, her eyes smarted for no accountable reason.

At last she decided to go to bed, leaving the hall light burning.

She had been in bed more than an hour when he came, quietly as though not to waken her.

When he came into the room, softly, she reached up and pulled on the reading light just above her head.

"Well, here you are," cheerfully. "Have a good time?"

"Yes. I've had a good time." Michael lighted a cigarette. Sat down in an easy chair.

She tried again. "The picnic must have been a long one."

Went Dancing.

"What? Oh—oh, yes—then we went to the flower show."

He turned the page. Was he deliberately trying to keep from talking?

"Then the flower show must have lasted pretty long. It's after 1."

"After 1?" glancing up. "So it is. Well, we danced after the flower show."

"You and who else?" She fondly believed that her question sounded nonchalant and casual.

There was no subterfuge, no hesitation in Michael's answer. "Kathleen asked me to take Marjorie Hutton. And I did. Marjorie wanted to dance afterward and I did that. She loves to dance."

But Kathleen Works mentioned it when Ellen met her several days later. It was no casual way in which she brought up the subject, either. "Did Mike tell you about the picnic?"

Pretended Nonchalance.

"Yes—" knowing perfectly well that Kathleen knew she was pretending all this nonchalance. "After the picnic and the flower show they went dancing. Did you go dancing?"

"Why, Ellen Dale, no, I didn't," Kathleen was all excitement. "Do you mean to tell me that they went dancing after the flower show? I just thought that's exactly where they'd go. I heard her asking him."

Ellen managed a laugh. "Well, I guess it wasn't hard to get his permission to go. He said they had a grand time. They must have. They danced until one."

Kathleen put her hand on her friend's, said seriously, "Mark my word, Ellen, that girl will make trouble between you and Mike if she can. She's crazy about him. She always has been. You'll have to watch your step."

Beauty Gloves Sure to Keep Hands Smooth

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THAT LADY of leisure who lolls in bed until noon, and then musters her energy for afternoon engagements has no excuse for unattractive hands. As long as time and money are at her disposal she needs but the "will to do" to cultivate beauty to her fingertips.

But the woman in the bungalow apron and the girl who scurries to work at nine—we'd make allowances for them. For who can bang a typewriter hour after hour, or sweep and dust and dishwash and still have hands enchantingly fair—unless she knows a few of the simple, inexpensive ways of hand care?

But once she knows, there's no excuse, for nowadays, thanks to the progress of modern beauty science, there are several ways in which the hands may be kept soft and youthful looking. These ways don't require lots of money. They take only the tiniest bit of time. And best of all they really work wonders toward making the hands features to brag about.

Gloves for the Gardener.

Even the woman whose hands are already rough and red from housework and who long since has despaired of restoring their charm can surprise herself in a few weeks if she'll take advantage of a certain offer. And take the woman who is absorbed in gardening. Maybe she feels she must sacrifice the charm of her hands to this. But no! Her problem, too, is solved with advent of some beauty gloves. Don't wrinkle your brow, and turn up your nose! These gloves aren't at all the type you're probably thinking of. They aren't those tight-fitting rubber gloves that bind and slow up circulation. Nor are they those bulky fabric gloves that make you feel a bit ragdollish. They are neat fitting, lambskin gloves which have been especially treated with cream. When you wear them, the heat of your hands brings a little of the cream out and this is immediately absorbed by the skin. All this goes on and you're perfectly unconscious of it, for to all appearances the gloves are much like ordinary gloves except they're a bit looser and more flexible, and slightly fragrant from the cream blended with the leather.

You'd never even guess there was cream in them from feeling them. About the only way you can tell is by the almost miraculous effect they have on your hands.

The gloves are so neat and sporty looking you'll adore wearing them for motoring and outdoor sports. Remember that wearing them around the house when you sweep or dust and tend to your spring housecleaning will be sure to bring beauty to your hands!

Compacts—All In One Shop.

A great many shoppers will hail with delight the new compact department which has recently opened in an F street store. Who hasn't trotted her poor legs off wandering here, there and yon in search of just the compact for a particular person, or dress, or occasion? Who hasn't worn blisters on her heels and callouses on the soles of her feet on such a mission? And how many times have we all wished that somebody would sooner or later gather every type of compact known to man (more literally woman) and place them side by side in one place?

At last our wish has been fulfilled, and you have only to call at this certain store to see the most tempting collection of compacts you ever dreamed existed. There's every kind! They come in all colors, shapes, sizes and, naturally, at all prices, beginning at $1.

Since most shoppers seem to agree that $1 ought to buy a pretty swell compact, the manager of this department has seen to it that her $1 collection is excellent.

It little matters whether you want a dizzy little plaid affair to go with some summery cotton, or whether you prefer a svelte affair that's particularly orchidaceous—you'll find it here.

Don't fail to visit one of the most interesting—and tempting—displays of the season.

Avoiding Nose Shine.

Query—No sooner does the weather turn warm than my nose begins to shine. I try to keep it fairly well whitewashed with powder but the shine wins out. Is there anything I can do that will help?

Answer—If you cleanse your face with a cream be cure to follow up with a good skin tonic to cut the surplus oil. If your skin is naturally oily try using a liquid cleanser instead of a cream.

You might be interested to know that there is an excellent product on the market created especially for shiny noses. Just the least bit of it rubbed over your nose is proof against shine.

Upside-Down Peach Cake Is Tasty Afternoon Dish

The peach upside-down cake—long lamented as too heavy a dessert for dinner and too elaborate for luncheon—has found its place among the popular fireside refreshments. Serve it with coffee after a light salad Sunday evening.

Fireside Refreshments Appropriate in Chill of Spring Days.

By Dorothea Duncan.

NOW IS THE TIME for fireside refreshments, served in the glow of an open fire when the half-hearted warmth of a spring Sunday afternoon begins to wane. This custom is crowding out the popularity of the 4 o'clock tea hour and eliminating the Sunday supper altogether.

Choose refreshments that are a bit more substantial than the thin sandwiches and frosted cakes so appropriate with a cup of hot tea. The idea is similar to that of a buffet supper, but it lacks the formality and gains a coziness all its own. A coffee table and occasional end tables will serve to hold cups and saucers and other needed dishes. You might serve a small jellied salad and crisp salad and crisp crackers at first, brought in on a large tray. The same tray can be used to carry out the empty salad plates and return with a delicious upside-down cake and a pot of freshly made coffee, sugar and cream.

You will like this recipe for peach upside-down cake. It will serve to glorify the few remaining cans of peaches from your winter supply and can be used again when fresh peaches are in season. Here it is:

Peach Upside-down Cake.

1¼ cup sifted cake flour
1¼ teaspoon double-acting baking powder or 2½ teaspoons ordinary baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup granulated sugar
4 tablespoons softened butter or other shortening
1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup milk
4 tablespoons butter
2 cups sliced peaches, fresh or canned
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed

Beat Mixture One Minute.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and sugar and sift together three times. Add butter. Combine egg, milk and vanilla. Add to flour mixture, stirring until all flour is dampened; then beat vigorously one minute.

Add four tablespoons butter in 8x8x2-inch pan or 8-inch skillet, over low flame. Add brown sugar (¼ teaspoon nutmeg may be mixed with brown sugar, if desired); stir until melted. On this arrange peach slices. Turn batter over contents of pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes, or until done. Loosen cake from sides of pan with spatula. Serve upside down on dish with peaches on top. Garnish with whipped cream if desired.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

1406

Queen Couped.

I had the pleasure of fulfilling a slam contract in the early stages of our match against Mr. and Mrs. P. Hal Sims by a cross-ruff and subsequent grand coup against the opposing Queen of trumps. I am outlining the bidding and play below:

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

Culbertson

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatiory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♣ (1)	Pass	1♡	Pass
2♣	Pass	3◇	Pass
4◇ (2)	Pass	5◇	Pass
6◇ (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A shade too weak for an opening two-bid.
2—Mrs. Culbertson wants to confirm the strength of my diamond suit.
3—This is not trap bidding. My wife had made up her mind to bid six if I could rebid diamonds, and did not respond with four hearts or four no trump. A fair diamond suit in my hand should be all that is needed to fulfill a slam contract.

The Play.

Mr. Sims opened a low club and I won the trick with the King in dummy and immediately led the singleton heart. Mrs. Sims went up with the Ace, and returned her partner's suit. I won this trick with the high club in dummy and then played the Ace and King of spades. The drop of the ten by West worried me. I continued with a low spade and ruffed with a low diamond, and when it held I felt a little better. A heart was trumped in dummy and a low club led, which I ruffed in my own hand with the other small trump. Another heart was trumped with dummy's nine of diamonds, and the last club led and ruffed, and Mr. Sims could not overruff my ten-spot. I now led my last heart and trumped with the Ace of diamonds, and Mrs. Sims hopelessly underruffed. The spade Jack was led from dummy and East's Queen and one trump was couped. The twelfth trick was won by my trump Jack, and the last trick with my trump King.

Comment.

At double dummy I could have fulfilled my contract by another line of play. I could have trumped just one heart in dummy and finessed against the diamond Queen. Then because of the very lucky fact that the Queen-ten of spades was only once guarded, under dummy's Ace-King-Jack-nine, I could have made four spade tricks by finessing the spade and thus obtained two more heart discards. Such a line of play, however, would have been very unsound, as the line of play which I adopted needed only fair divisions in all suits and the Queen of diamonds in the East hand.

Fabric Ranked With Fashion

Hollywood Studio Designer Likes Material With Shiny Surface.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, May 9.—Reversing the usual order of fashion, Murray Mayer, Hollywood's newest studio designer, declares that line is often dependent upon fabric and that well-dressed women should consider the fabric as fully as important as the style.

Mayer, who comes to Columbia studios from an exclusive New York shop's studio of design which he headed, is particularly enthusiastic about high luster fabrics which pick up the lights readily, highlight the entire figure and slenderize it, and has used them most effectively in his first studio wardrobe.

For Nancy Carroll's next starring picture he has created a formal gown of black cire, a material which he chooses because of its shiny surface and its ability to drape gracefully, he declares.

The gown is made full skirted, draped from a wide hip band in the East Indian manner now in vogue. The high bodice is suspended from a halter of jewels. A wide, cylindrical ruff, fastened with jewels is worn on either arm between shoulder and elbow.

Another glimmering costume is a cocktail suit of green and gold metal worn by Marian Marsh. An ankle-length skirt has a high set-on bodice of pale green net. Pink and white gardenias are partially concealed under the soft roll-over bib collar. A tailored metal jacket has wide revers and is fastened with a huge jade pin.

Silver, Mauve Gowns Popular for Jubilee

London (AP).—Silver and mauve is a popular jubilee evening wear color alliance. A becoming model was displayed in tunic style in silver lame. A garland of fresh parma violets for the head matched a posy tucked in the belt to blend with touches of mauve material introduced at the waist and in the elbow-length sleeves.

Heat Is Effective Weapon Against Common Pains

Neuritis May Be Caused by Irritated Nerve Near the Skin.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN yesterday's discussion of a few types of pain mention was made of the disabling character of the symptom. The afflicted patient may be prostrated or merely have his efficiency interfered with.

Neuritis. The pain of neuritis may at first be little more than tenderness along the course of a nerve, particularly if the nerve travels close to the surface of the skin. Much depends upon the degree of the inflammation. The pain is described as burning, tingling and sometimes exceedingly intense. As a rule, it is increased by pressure or movement. If the nerve contains fibers which supply muscles (motor fibers) there may be spasmodic contractions of the muscles and cramps deep within these structures. If the inflammation continues there may be paralysis of certain muscles because the nerve may cease to function. In multiple neuritis, pain usually arises because some toxin that has a special fondness for nerve tissue is circulating in the blood. At the outset there is numbness and loss of feeling in the skin. Occasionally the skin is acutely sensitive, particularly the soles of the feet, so that the slightest touch can not be borne. Paralysis of an extremity is not an infrequent result. The steady, boring nature of the pain is typical.

Shingles Form of Neuritis.

Herpes zoster, or shingles, is also a neuritis. In addition to the symptoms already enumerated, the nerve inflammation is usually accompanied by reddened areas, sometimes with blisters that occur on the skin. The pain is ordinarily burning or lightning-like, and there may be some temperature. The pain can not be compared in severity with that of multiple neuritis.

Neuralgia, particularly tic douloureux or trifacial neuralgia, is accompanied by an intense, extremely acute paraxysmal pain that is darting and stabbling. It may be brought on by a breath of cool air, even by the touch of a feather. It is not constant—in fact, days or weeks may elapse between these vicious exhibitions of pain. There are many sorts of neuralgias, but all are recognized by this darting, stabbing pain that patients describe as "cutting like a knife." One type of neuralgia affects the nerves at the back of the head. Other nerves involved bring on pain in the shoulder joint, the lower back, the throat, the side of the neck and the region of the ear. In all of these the sharp, lancelike nature is characteristic.

Sciatica. The pain of sciatica frequently follows an attack of lumbago, the seat of the disease becoming fixed in the sciatic nerve that leads to the leg. Sometimes the nerve itself it inflamed, but as a rule pain follows pressure—the result of arthritis, tumors in the pelvis, or growths pressing on the nerve trunk. The pain in sciatica is tearing and cutting in character and travels to the hip, to the inner side of the thigh, and down to the calf of the leg, the ankle and the heel. It may last a few hours or longer. If pressure on the nerve is constant the pain will be continuous.

No one remedy will relieve pain arising from any and all conditions. The cause must be found. Sometimes to prevent the patient from actually damaging himself a powerful narcotic will need to be employed, but drugs that destroy pain may be likened to the hauling down of a warning signal. The danger is still present.

Surgery plays an important role in the treatment of trogminal neuralgia and permanent cures often result through skilled surgical intervention. Inflamed and poisoned nerves demand the elimination of toxins and rest for the parts. Heat stimulates circulation, carries away waste products, brings new blood to the areas and promotes healing. All forms of irritation must be avoided, whether the pain emanates from muscle, joint, or nerve. Pain is the effect, and for every effect there is a cause.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

IF May 10 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

On this day it will be advisable to stick to the truth and nothing but the truth, as exaggerations or falsifications will result in trouble. Theoretical surmises will be responsible for many erroneous conclusions, so the wise man or woman will not indulge in them.

Today probably will be a good one for those of an artistic temperament, and constructive thinking may result in some very satisfactory work being started. This is an excellent day for the getting together of congenial friends, visiting or entertaining, providing excesses are not thought essential to create a festive atmosphere.

On this day there may be a tendency to repeat the same thing over again and again, in conversations, so you will guard against this if you wish to avoid becoming tiresome. Married and engaged couples, as well as those dreaming love's sweet dreams, will show good judgment if they will refrain from expressing disapproval of any suggestion, without first weighing carefully the effect of their words.

If a woman and May 10 is your birthday, it should be very enjoyable, if you will make up your mind to do your part in making it so. It will be wise to judge things today by the spirit that prompts the one responsible for them, or from a sentimental point of view, rather than from the standard of intrinsic worth, or from the dollar and cent measure.

Your preconceived idea of a person, whom you are likely to be introduced to today, may be agreeably upset, if you will meet them with an unbiased mind. Matrimony may be the most logical course of life for you, but it should not prevent your taking an active interest in other things. Singing, music, elocution, stenography, designing, as well as selling, are among some of the professional, as well as business activities, which you should be well fitted to follow.

The child born on May 10, as soon as it reaches school age, probably will display a gift of being able to make friends readily, as well as to assume a leadership among others.

If a man and May 10 is your natal day, vigorous and possessing an alert mind, combined with a pleasing personality, you should be successful in practicing law, medicine, educational work, the lecture platform or pulpit or selling some specialized line.

Browning Letters Sold for $40,000

12 Letters Were Addressed to Sisters-in-Law.

Twenty-two letters written by Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett Browning in the first years of their marriage were sold in New York a few days ago for $40,000. Ten of the letters were written by Robert Browning. All were addressed to Mrs. Browning's sisters, Henrietta and Arabel.

Although they never have been published it is said the letters reveal many hitherto unknown details. Announcement of the discovery of the correspondence was made a little more than a month ago. Until their recent sale the letters were the property of a Londoner.

Hikers to Visit Muirkurk Area In Sunday Trip

By Robert Shosteck.

Sunday the Wanderbirds Hiking Club will trek through the countryside about Muirkirk, visiting the many beautiful lakes and ponds which mark the scene of important iron-mining operations carried on in this region over 50 years ago. A high grade ore was obtained from these pits, from which scientists have recovered the fossil remains of giant dinosaurs and palm-like trees. Naturalists in the party will also be interested in the tour of a part of the United States Experimen Farm at the start of the hike.

Readers of The Washington Post and club members planning to go on the 7-mile trip will meet at 10 a. m. in front of The Post Building. Buses will carry the group to a point 1½ miles from Beltsville on the old Annapolis road, where the hike begins. The round trip fare will be 50 cents and reservations must be made at Nat. 4200. Bring lunch and a cup. The trail is an easy one with little climbing.

A short distance from the Annapolis road the group will come to the first stopping place; the laboratories and kennels of the Bureau of Animal Industry in the vicinity of Stiles and Salmon avenues. The roads of the experiment farm are named after the world's renowned biologists. After viewing the laboratories and the animals used in Uncle Sam's tests, the hikers will turn downhill to the left to a group of ponds in the woods and proceed northeastward along a woods road to the first of the large ponds—Swampoodle. A spring will be found nearby. Turning west, the route follows and crosses the upper end of Beaverdam Creek, continuing past the old Annapolis road to the ponds and gravel pit not far from Muirkirk. From the gravel pit we follow a trail through the woods and emerge at Queen's Chapel, a small colored church. From here a woods trail leads to the Blue Ponds, the largest in the region. The margin of one of these ponds is choked with water-lily pads. The rusted remnants of the hoisting apparatus are to be seen at the east end of the largest pond, and large chunks of high grade ore is scattered throughout this locality.

From Blue Ponds the route follows trails and dirt roads eastward along a small stream to the fire clay pit which is off to the left, not far from the Bowie road. This pit is still in use, the clay being utilized in connection with the manufacture of paint pigments. The buses will meet the hikers at Contee, a small community about one mile down Bowie road at the railroad crossing. If time permits, the group will stop at Muirkirk for a brief visit to the Waldo Paint Factory. Here may be seen the beehive kilns and the machinery used in paint-making.

On Thursday at 8 p. m. the Wanderbirds and their friends will tour the entire Potomac Valley from Great Falls to Chesapeake Bay in a lantern slide exhibit and lecture by Adrian Sizer, one of Washington's veteran hikers. This show, which is open to the public, will be held in the auditorium of the Thomson School at Twelfth and L streets northwest. Sizer promises many interesting Wanderbird poses and hike scenes which none of the group have seen. Many historic views will be shown, including several of the great ice jam of 1918, and also scenes on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal at the height of its popularity.

Bush Kleinschmidt will lead Sunday's Red Triangle trip down Dead Run and along the Potomac to Scott Run and Swinks Mill. The group meets at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue at 2 p. m. A camp fire party will be held at Swink's Mill.

Counsel for Anne Cannon's Father Assails Smith.

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., May 9.—Efforts of F. Brandon Smith, jr., to gain custody of little Anne Cannon Reynolds 2d were laid by counsel for Joseph F. Cannon to a desire to control the child's wealth as the jury heard arguments today in Smith's $250,000 alienation of affections suit against his former father-in-law.

In a blistering attack upon the 29-year-old Charlotte real estate operator, Jake F. Newell, of Cannon's counsel, derided him as "a man who ought to be in skirts, suing for heart balm like a woman."

Asserting the evidence showed it was Smith and not his wife who waged the fight for the child, Newell said the reason was not Smith's interest in the baby, but his interest in her income and wealth as the daughter of Smith Reynolds.

Arguments by counsel were completed today at the regular time for court adjournment, and Judge W. F. Harding announced he would deliver his charge and give the case to the jury tomorrow morning.

Naturalist Stipka, of the National Park Service, took 35 members of Marjorie Webster School for a hike in the park Tuesday night. The group returned to the Sixteenth street reservoir for a supper cooked by a group of Scouters and Scouts from Troop 43 at National Baptist Memorial Church.

The Premier Cab Co. will collect them. They also may be left at any Standard Oil service station.

Camporees' over-night camping contests are being held each week by various districts. The new Rising Sun Division, comprising Anacostia and Congress Heights, held one last Saturday. The Fourth Division will hold one this Saturday at Camp Wilson. Cathedral, White House, Montgomery and Arlington divisions will camp May 18, and the Capitol, Redskin, Piney Branch, Rock Creek and Chevy Chase divisions, May 25. The board of commissioners voted to eliminate the council camporee this year.

Eagle Scouts to Meet.

The Eagle Scout Association will meet at Scout Headquarters Tuesday night. A nominating committee will be appointed. Dr. William T. McCloskey, will speak on "Opportunities in the Jamboree."

Four Appointed To Probe Crash Of Fire Engine

Hazen Seeks to Ascertain Speed of Vehicles; One Victim May Die.

While one fireman hovered between life and death and three others recovered slowly from serious injuries, a special board of inquiry was appointed yesterday to investigate Wednesday night's fire engine-street car crash at Eleventh and V streets northwest.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen named the board and ordered an extensive probe. He sought to determine, if possible, the speed of both vehicles and whether the one-man street car operator was forewarned of the approaching apparatus.

The board includes Inspector B. A. Lamb, of the Police Traffic Bureau; Assistant Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, Fred A. Sager, chief engineer of the Public Utilities Commission, and Edward F. Dawson, claims agent of the corporation counsel's office. Independent probes were started by Fire Department and Capital Transit Co. officials.

Official Comment Withheld.

A preliminary investigation was conducted yesterday at the accident scene. Official comments on the crash were withheld pending recovery of the injured men. Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom said he would seek first-hand information from firemen on the truck as soon as their condition permitted.

Those injured, all attached to No. 9 Engine Company, were Private Raymond Creel, 30, of 413 D street northeast, Garfield Hospital, with head and internal injuries.

Sergt. George E. Swords, 38, of 414 Seward square southeast, Casualty Hospital, with concussion of the brain, cuts and bruises.

Private Percy Graves, 33, of 425 Sixteenth street southeast, driver of the fire engine, Emergency Hospital, with leg and body injuries.

Creel's Condition Serious.

Physicians said that Private Creel was the most seriously hurt. He was given but slight chance to recover. Sergt. Swords' condition also remains doubtful, it was reported.

Reckless driving charges against George H. Williams, 35, motorman of the street car, were postponed in Traffic Court yesterday.

Both vehicles were badly damaged. The fire engine overturned, hurling its occupants nearly 75 feet. Other engines responded to extinguish a small garage fire.

Smith's Plea For Mistrial Is Rejected

Roanoke, Va., May 9.—Another motion for mistrial, this time for T. Roosevelt Smith, one of 23 defendants in a Franklin County liquor conspiracy case, was denied by Judge John Paul in United States court today.

A remark of the court considered "prejudicial" by defense counsel was the basis of the motion. A similar ground was cited in a motion for mistrial in the case of Jack Bess yesterday, but that motion also was denied.

Meanwhile, the eighty-ninth witness had brought to nearly 500,000 gallons the amount of whisky sent out of Franklin County since September, 1928, the beginning of the conspiracy, according to the indictment. With the end of the third week in view, former reputed liquor runners continued on the stand.

John W. Rosser, Lynchburg liquor baron sentenced to the Atlanta penitentiary and held at the Salem jail, was brought here this afternoon, but lengthy questioning of two Campbell County men—Howard Davis and C. W. ("Catfish") Wood—postponed his testimony.

For the second time a former liquor runner told today of payments of protection money to an alleged illicit distiller when C. G. Kelley said that his Roanoke employer, Dick Lockett, added $20 every month to his liquor bill to pay Roosevelt Smith. Kelley said Smith also once loaded him with liquor in bent tins, "already caught once."

'Doped' Cigarets' Maker Sentenced

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 9.—The maximum sentence for manufacture of drugged cigarettes, a $1,000 fine and 12 months in jail, as imposed on Albert St. Clair, of Roanoke, as high school students and others ranging from 15 to 21 years of age pointed him out in Police Court here today.

The students identified him as the man who sold them the doped "reefers" that cause a cheap drunk, insanity, and eventually, death.

St. Clair will face charges in Juvenile Court tomorrow of contributing to the delinquency of minors as the result of statements by three witnesses, boys 15, 17 and 18 years of age, that they purchased the cigarettes from him. He noted an appeal from the Police Court sentence.

A story of introduction here of the drug-producing plant growing in vacant lots across from Jefferson High School, in fence corners, on lawns of private residences and on the banks of Roanoke River, was told by R. C. Johnson, identification expert of the police department, who has been making an investigation.

Gov. Nice Names Wade To Republican Position On Conservation Board

Bentz Is Slated For a Berth Also

More Jobs to Change in Penal System, Is Prediction.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 9.—Dr. J. Hubert Wade, Boonsboro, Md., physician and former chairman of the Democratic State central committee, will be appointed minority member of the new conservation commission, it was learned here tonight.

The chairman of the commission, an Eastern Shore Republican, has already been appointed. It is understood that the other Republican member may be Frank Bentz, of Hagerstown. Lancelot Jacques, a western Maryland supporter of Gov. Harry W. Nice, is understood to be slated for appointment as chairman of one of the new commissions, but his exact post has not been chosen.

Dr. Wade, although he has remained in the party, is noted for his intense antipathy to former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie. In last year's primary, Dr. Wade conducted the Washington County campaign of Charles Henry Conley, running against Ritchie.

Twelve-Year Feud.

The Ritchie faction won the primary, but lost the general election by 3,000. The Democrats in the county have a normal majority of 2,000. During the session of the General Assembly, Dr. Wade was in conference with Gov. Nice. One of these conferences was followed by the appointment of Charles Weagley, a Wade man, to the State Board of Education.

The feud between Dr. Wade and former Gov. Ritchie, as representing the organization Democrats, dates back for about 12 years. Dr. Wade was then a member of the State Board of Welfare. Gov. Ritchie procured his resignation from the board.

Dr. Wade was then elected to the State Senate, where he combined forces with William Curran, at that time State senator from Baltimore. The combination, defeated in its efforts to elect Curran to the presidency of the Senate, turned its energies to forcing through the first of the large appropriations for the University of Maryland.

More Penal Jobs Due.

Later Ritchie threw the organization support in Washington County behind William Preston Lane. Lane and his cohorts took a majority of the places on the county central committee, and the Lane political fortunes were founded. They flowered later when Lane was elected attorney general of Maryland. Dr. Wade, meanwhile, had a sympathetic ear for anti-Ritchie expressions in the party.

The appointment, announced yesterday, of Elmer B. Carl as superintendent of the Roxbury penal farm, is just the first of a series of replacements in the penal system, it was learned yesterday. Carl, who lives in Hagerstown, was formerly president of the Young Men's Republican League.

The Republicans have a majority of the State board of welfare, which made it possible for them to appoint Carl. Other employes of the farm are protected by a merit system, which provides that they can only be dismissed after charges are filed and proved against them. Republican plans for getting around this barrier have not been revealed, but they seem confident that it can be done.

Citizens Polled On Selection Of Bridge Site

Shepherdstown Editor Is Backing Ballot on PWA Project.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., May 9.—Citizens of this section will be given an opportunity to express their choice of a location for the proposed PWA bridge across the Potomac River at Shepherdstown. A ballot has been issued by C. S. Musser, one of the backers of the bridge project, who proposed the James Rumsey Memorial route.

Mr. Musser is distributing ballots through the Shepherdstown newspaper, of which he is editor. Citizens are asked to express their preference on the Rumsey avenue route or the Martin route, and the purchase of the old bridge so as not to confiscate private property.

The vote will be tabulated and sent to the State road commission to show sentiment of the citizens.

Three routes have been surveyed by the commission, but no selection has been made.

Retailers Push For Court Test Of Receipt Tax

Appeal to Be Filed in Few Days by State Dealers Group.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 9.—The 1 per cent gross receipts tax, backbone of Maryland's plan to finance relief expenditures, will be subjected to a court attack as to its validity.

Formal announcement was made today by the Retail Association of Maryland that formal action will be filed in court "within a few days."

The tax was passed during the closing days of the recent General Assembly after the House and the Senate had been deadlocked for days over a proposed 2 per cent general sales levy. The Senate refused to accept the tax after the House had passed it and the gross receipts levy, which requires that every retail merchant pay 1 per cent of his gross sales, finally was adopted.

The other components to the tax plan were: A tax on slot machines, a bill which would allow the State to take over unclaimed bank deposits and a contingent revenue from the State direct and collateral inheritance taxes.

Gov. Nice already has announced he would veto the bank deposit bill and he has been urged strongly to veto the slot machine measure.

The announcement from the Retail Trade Association did not state on what grounds the act would be contested. It was understood, however, that one point of contest would be the ruling which requires that the tax shall be paid on installment payments received since enactment of the law, even if the installments were paid on goods actually purchased prior to that time.

The Child Labor Law Once Again Militates Against Theater, Actor and Public

Pulitzer Prize Winner Voided By Lunatic Law

Producer Denies Booking; the Law Enters Films; Theater Jottings.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Another exemplification of the deleterious effects upon Washington theatrical endeavor of the lunatic child labor laws now effective in the District of Columbia was furnished yesterday by a Mackay radiogram received by Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, manager of the National Theater and impresario of the National Theater Players, to the following effect, verbatim:

Thanks for your congratulations. Sorry to have to turn you down on "The Old Maid" for Washington. Impossibility of using children of correct age prompts me to do this and if children could be used we would then want to include Washington in our tour. Regards: HARRY MOSES.

To go back to the beginning, it was the hope of Manager Cochran to bring "The Old Maid" to his National Theater as the Pulitzer Prize winner of 1935. An essential character in the play is a 4-year-old girl. Mr. Cochran's proposal was to supplant this child with an 18-year-old actress, explaining to the audience at each performance, or in a prominently displayed program note, that owing to the asinine requirements of the local child labor law it would be impossible to present the child called for by the script and urging its indulgence for the substitution of an older player. The answer to his proposal is the telegram, or radiogram, or whatever it is, from Harry Moses, producer of "The Old Maid," to Mr. Cochran, quoted above.

Answer Always Is "No."

This is a lamentable situation. No more lamentable is it, however, than has been pointed out in this space many times before when the operation of a law that is unjust to the theater, the actor and the public has resulted in cancellations of sterling plays that Washington had every right to expect to see as a community whose cultural impulses are high and whose inclinations to inflict injury upon aspiring and talented youth are nonexistent.

But always the answer is "No." No differentiation can be made as among the favored, the underfavored or the persecuted, if any, youngsters of the theater.

A child may come to Washington accompanied by parents, tutors, nurses, bodyguards and whatnot, but, if the age is under that prescribed by the District's crazy code, that child may not appear upon a public stage for pay after 7 p. m., or some such silly hour. It is a unique and an absurd travesty on mature and thoughtful legislation, supposedly conceived in the spirit of justice and the greatest good to the greatest number, that confronts the community.

But to get back to "The Old Maid"—which Washington will not see, for reasons already made plain—that winner of the 1935 Pulitzer prize was not an instant hit. When it was given its premiere in Baltimore it was not hailed as one of the theater's imperishable gifts to its faithful parishioners.

Built Up Gradually.

When it went into the Empire Theater in New York it began modestly from the standpoint of box-office "wallop." In its first week it grossed only a meager $4,500. This crept up in course of time to $5,500, then to $6,000, then to $7,500, and when it really struck its stride a $9,000 weekly average was about what the adding machine struck off.

And then the Pulitzer prize as the best play of the year.

It was especially to be wished that "The Old Maid" might be shown here, because it was virtually staged and directed by Karl Nielsen, who now directs the activities of the National Theater Players, although certain others received greater credit than he did under the managerial directorship of Panjandrum Cochran.

But the child labor law says "No." Somebody ought to have the courage and the power to say "No" to the child labor law.

There is a new local addition to the long list of "Kentucky colonels" being written into the record of his administration by Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of the Blue Grass State. This latest recruit to his honorary staff, if that is what it is! Harry Hunter, Washington manager of the Paramount Pictures Corporation in the National Capital. Mr. Hunter, film executive, master of ceremonies and bon vivant de luxe, was apprised of his appointment to Gov. Laffoon's staff of some 3,000 potential fighting men while on a recuperative visit to White Sulphur Springs. The whole thing, you understand, is still a secret, and not to be made public. So please don't tell a soul. But when you see Harry again it might be well to call him "Colonel" instead of plain "Mister," just the way you do "Angie" Ratto, manager of Loew's Palace!

Come on, MacTavish!

Manager Charles Brennan of the Metropolitan Theater has invited all the McFaddens listed in the Washington telephone directory to see "McFadden's Flats," as his guests on Friday night—which would be tomorrow by the clock.

His original plan was to invite, also, all of the MacTavishes similarly listed. The comedy, it will be recalled by veterans in the theater, is a recital of the amusing incidents attending a feud between the houses of McFadden and MacTavish, not unlike the one which prevailed between the more classic houses of the Montagues and Capulets in a certain whimsy of Will Shakespeare's more or less widely known under the title of "Romeo and Juliet." But, much to Mr. Brennan's chagrin, a search of both the telephone book and city directory failed to reveal a single MacTavish resident in the City of Washington.

Any loyal Scot, a Washington resident and able to prove that he is a bona-fide MacTavish, will be admitted to the Metropolitan tomorrow night by Manager Brennan, who will post a lookout in the lobby with instructions to be on the alert for any such rarity that might put in an appearance.

It is a little late in the day—or maybe we mean week—to mention it, but as a bit of relaxation following yesterday's 15 minutes on the air through WJSV at 12:15 p. m., we went down stairs to a lodge seat in the Earl Theater to listen to Gus Arnheim and orchestra and revue. It is a swell show. I particularly liked the deep-throated warbling of Maxine Tappen, whose name suggests a dancer rather than singer, and the droll comedy of Gene Sheldon, whose banjo twanging, it seems to me, is next to that of Eddie Peabody's, if not on a par with it. And another thing. By a deft employment of film in connection with a cleverly contrived stage setting, Gus has managed to give his act a touch of novelty in the finale that is as welcome as it is unusual. If you haven't heard this gang, hurry down today. It is your last chance.

"Shoot to Kill."

I am reliably informed—or, at least, I think I am—that the Department of Justice has fostered none of the sudden avalanche of gangster films glorifying the activities of the Federal authorities in running down crime.

Some weeks ago we ran a Sabbath lead on this new approach to the mobster picture afforded by the Government's unparalleled success in bringing the country's public enemies to heel. It was pointed out then that there were certain points in the narrative qualities of the stories that grated a little on the nerves of the officials engaged in the grim business of subduing the Dillingers, the Baby Face Nelsons and the rest of the torrid crew that have spread havoc over the land.

Notwithstanding all this morbid business, the authorities in charge of the squelching of the crime wave are not averse to seeing how the screen depicts their minions of the law.

The Chief Is Noncommittal.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, for example, could not wait for the Warner production of "G-Men," starring James Cagney, to reach the Capital, as it will tomorrow, but journeyed a few days ago to Baltimore to see the picture at the Stanley Theater there, presided over by Rodney Collier, former managing director of the Rialto in this city.

Mr. Hoover has not committed himself since viewing the film, but it is reported with some semblance of truth that when the final fade-out had faded out, he was among those who were applauding most enthusiastically.

Write your own ticket.

"G Men," however, is not the only governmental version of the gangster problem that is soon to be seen on the screen. Yesterday afternoon, who bobs up at the desk but Fred Marshall, the cherubic stentor of RKO-Radio Pictures, who has brought "One Night of Love," "Broadway Bill" and other hits to town, but at the moment is dedicating his ample talents to the furtherance of the interests of "Let 'Em Have It," a United Artists' production featuring Richard Arlen and Virginia Bruce. And right after him who should pop in but that amiable Beau Brummel of avant couriers, Harry Essex, abandoning the so-called "legitimate" stage, for a time, to lend his talents to the aggrandizement of "Les Miserables"—which, according to the late Wilton Lackaye, many actors not only could not act but could not even pronounce! Welcome boys, both, and they are bringing in a couple of grand shows. If I am wrong, sue me.

Spring Fashion Note.

Audrey Sieber, having Fifth and Park avenued during her fortnight's release from official duties on the Earle stage returns to that rostrum tomorrow.

Observe what the well-dressed mistress of ceremonies will wear.

And, if you are of the male persuasion, try to describe it!

My typewriter gave up long ago.

One Was Hunted; the Other Hunts

Entertainment For Impending Week Is Ample

Stock, Films and Park Are Sources of Amusement as Spring Creeps Up.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

For their third bill of the "little season," the National Theater Players, beginning next Monday night, will present for the first time in Washington another play that is still running successfully on Broadway—"The Bishop Misbehaves," a semi-mystery drama, in which Walter Connolly is appearing in the title role in New York. The bishop, one gathers, does not seriously misbehave. He is a kindly churchman with a penchant for crime detection and when he encounters clews that he deems ominous he runs the matter out and succeeds in placing the guilt where it belongs. Forrest Orr will appear in the Connolly role in the local presentation of the piece and Edwina Wise, the company's new ingenue, will be given her first real test in a feminine role of prime importance.

Fredric March and Charles Laughton have the pivotal roles of Jean Valjean and Javert, respectively, in Twentieth Century's new picturization of Victor Hugo's monumental story of "Les Miserables," which will be seen for the first time on a local screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow. The foremost feminine role will be played by Frances Drake. The supporting cast includes such notables as Sir Cecil Hardwicke, Rochell Hudson and John Beale. This story, concerning one of the greatest man-hunts in fiction, is one of extraordinary interest and power. It will be supplemented by a Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, short sound subjects and a new issue of the Metrotone News.

The war of the United States Government against the master criminals of the country has been translated into a vivid and realistic drama under the title of "G-Men," a Warner Brothers production, starring James Cagney, which begins a week's engagement on the screen at the Earle Theater tomorrow. Supporting Cagney in this minutely accurate demonstration of the methods and scientific processes of the Department of Justice in ridding the Nation of organized crime are to be seen Ann Dvorak, Margaret Lindsay, Robert Armstrong, Barton McLane, Monte Blue and Regis Toomey. The stage bill will be headlined by Fred Sanborn, assisted by Jeffrey Saylor and Lillian, and will also include Ross Pierce and Shuster in "The Big Broadcast of 1935;" Barr and Estes, dancers; the Six Lucky Boys and Herb Cook and his Three Little Words.

• • • •

"The Informer," one of the most impressive screen productions of the season will inaugurate a week's engagement at RKO-Keith's tomorrow. The star of the picture is Victor McLaglen, who, in the role of Gypo, does the best work of his career and takes rank with the foremost actors the cinema can boast. He is supported by Heather Angel, Preston Foster, J. M. Kerrigan, Una O'Connor, Margot Grahame, Donald Meek, Wallace Ford and many others of note. The story concerns the happenings of one night in the turbulent Dublin of 1922.

That quaint, "Caspar Milquetoast" type of comic, Charles Butterworth, will take possession of the screen at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow in the title role of "Baby Face Harrington," a new sort of comedy, in which the principal feminine role is played by Una Merkel, recently seen on the same screen in "One New York Night." Others in the cast are Eugene Pallette, Donald Meek, Harvey Stephenson and Nat Pendleton. On the stage, Earl Carroll's "Vanities" will supply a complete revue, peopled by some 60 singers, dancers and comedians. The cast is headed by that robustious team of acrobatic knockabouts, Mitchell and Durant, and includes, among others, the Collette Sisters, Helen Charleston, the Three Samuels Brothers, Rosie Moran and Barbara Snyder.

"McFadden's Flats," a new picturization of the famous stage comedy created by Gus Hill, will be the major screen attraction at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Walter C. Kelly and Andy Clyde in the co-stellar roles. This hilarious story of a friendly feud is one of the classics of America's popular-priced amusements. Richard Cromwell and Betty Furness supply the juvenile love interest. Jane Darwell also is an important member of the cast. Fifi D'Orsay in a new screen musical comedy, a new issue of the "See America First" series, a cartoon comedy and full 15-minute newsreel will complete the bill.

• • • •

Feodor Chaliapin, famous Russian basso, will continue the pictured star on the screen of the Belasco Theater in the film version of "Don Quixote" through Wednesday of next week. This notable production, directed by the exiled Pabst of Germany, has attracted wide attention since its opening in the Capital. The extension of the engagement through next Wednesday will restore the Belasco to its regular opening day of Thursday for new bills.

• • • •

Lionel Barrymore, Bela Lugosi, Elizabeth Allen and their associates in the cast of "The Mark of the Vampire" have acquitted themselves so well on the screen of Loew's Columbia that this thrilling camera drama is to be continued through a second week, beginning tomorrow. It is a "horror" picture of the first rank and is being billed in its second week as "the picture that made a sissy out of Frankenstein."

• • • •

The Shakespeare Society of Washington, in conjunction with the Community Center Department, tonight will offer "King Henry VIII" in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest. A cast of the most notable players Washington is able to muster will appear in this full-length Shakespearean play.

All of the fun devices are in full operation and on May 25 the Crystal Pool, one of the most perfectly appointed natatoria in the country will be opened to the public.

At the Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the customary Sunday matinee, the attraction will be "Dangerous Curves," latest production of the Independent Burlesque Association, staged by Col. James J. Lake, manager of the Gayety and vice president of Independent. The company is headed by Sunya "Smiles" Slane—which all will agree is quite a name—Peggy Hill, Hilda Allison, Joe De Rita, Floyd Hallicy and Harry Cornell.

Water Project Survey Urged At Winchester

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 9.—Citing six reasons why the city planning commission considers it imperative that immediate action be taken to obtain a new source of water for use here, W. Nelson Page, chairman, yesterday asked the city council that an investigation of potential supplies be made without delay.

Tentative plans offered by the planning group call for an expenditure of approximately $500,000, to provide employment for several hundred persons over a period of from two to three years and to supply the city with water to meet the needs of 300,000 persons.

The supply source suggested by engineers after a survey several years ago was the Cedar Creek watershed, more than 90 square miles. It was claimed water from this area would be soft.

Page told the council the present supply is inadequate to meet severe drought or to care for growth of the city. No industries using quantities of water will consider Winchester, he said, adding that there have been many inquiries "along these lines." He said State health authorities assert the present supply is in danger and that fire underwriters consider the supply insufficient for fighting a serious blaze.

The council has referred the problem to committees, with the request a report be submitted at a special meeting soon. It is understood any new development would be financed by bonds and a Federal grant, if available under the works bill.

Cat Foils Attempts To Kidnap Kittens

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salem, W. Va., May 9.—"Grandmother," a 15-year-old cat in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Jules Laurent here, has frustrated frequent attempts to kidnap her two kittens.

Since their birth two weeks ago another cat and a poodle dog have made several plays to "snatch" the kittens; but the aged mother proved victor in all the frays, never hesitating to resort to rough clawing methods, although she shows more consideration for the other cat than she does for the dog.

Baer Suffers Slight Burn At Studio

Blank Cartridge Fired at Radio Rehearsal Injures Champ.

He Returns to His Camp After Being Treated at N. J. Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., May 9.—Max Baer, heavyweight boxing champion, suffered a painful but not severe burn today when a blank cartridge pistol was discharged near him while he was rehearsing a radio sketch in a hotel here.

Baer was treated at Hazard Hospital, Long Branch, together with Peg La Centra, also in the sketch, who was burned on the face. Miss La Centra returned to New York and Baer to his Long Branch camp.

The fighter had just completed his first outdoor workout in preparation for his forthacoming championship bout with James J. Braddock, and had gone to the hotel to rehearse his program before dinner, he said afterward, in describing the accident.

Complained About Shots.

Shots and sirens are used for sound effects in the detective serial in which he is the principal. Baer, accompanied by Jerry Casale, former New Jersey fight promoter, who now is associated with the Baer camp, was jokingly complaining that the shots fired by Al Sinton, sound effect man for the National Broadcasting Co., were not loud enough.

Casale, who serves as a guard at Baer's Long Branch home, drew his gun, loaded with blanks, and was showing it to Baer when it exploded.

Wadding struck the fighter over the heart and the fire penetrated his clothing.

At his home the champion declared he had not been hurt badly. Ancil Hoffman, his manager, expressed concern, however, because his charge's training campaign may not be resumed for a day or two.

Baer Admits Fright.

Baer said the accident "scared the life out of me."

"I felt the burn in my side but didn't know what had happened," he said. "Peg (Miss La Centra) let out a shriek and cried like a baby."

He said that he had telephoned his mother in California to assure her he was not seriously hurt and that he expected to resume training as soo nas possible.

"I can't stay out too long," he said. "I got to lick this guy Braddock."

No Delay Expected.

New York, May 9 (AP).—Unless unforeseen complications develop, Max Baer and James J. Braddock will meet for Baer's heavyweight boxing crown in Madison Square Garden's Long Island Bowl on June 13 as scheduled.

James J. Johnston, the Garden's boxing director, heaved a big sigh of relief when he was informed that the injury Baer received at Asbury Park this afternoon was "painful" rather than serious.

"They've given Baer an injection of serum as a precaution against lockjaw," said Johnston, "and unless there are complications in his condition the fight will go on as scheduled."

Meade Out, Workman To Ride Bradley Horse

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 9.—Apparently not satisfied that Omaha is the better horse following his decisive victory in the Kentucky Derby, five 3-year-olds, each of which finished far back of William Woodward's chestnut flash at Churchill Downs, will be given another chance Saturday when they face the son of Gallant Fox in the $25,000 Preakness at Pimlico.

Warren Wright's Nellie Flag, the strapping filly which disappointed her followers in the Derby, heads the quintet that includes E. R. Bradley's Boxthorn, Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Psychic Bid, Mrs. Walter M. Jefford's Commonwealth and Mrs. W. S. Kilmer's Sun Fairplay.

Whiskolo May Race.

There also is a chance that Whiskolo, which carried the silks of Mrs. F. C. Mars' Milky Way Farm to third place in the Derby, may be among the dozen or more entries when they are announced tomorrow morning. Nothing has been heard of the son of Diavolo since his great stretch drive in the Downs and Matt Daiger, secretary of the Maryland Jockey Club, said he would not be surprised if the name of the colt was dropped into the entry box.

Several surprises popped up today as the experts searched the probable field for a horse that would offer Omaha a battle over the track where his great sire galloped to victory five years ago. One was the announcement that Psychic Bid was en route from New York, where he was shipped following his disappointing effort in the Derby.

Another was the decision of William Hurley, trainer in charge of the Bradley horses in the East, that Black Helen, diminutive filly, which won the Florida Derby, would not accompany Boxthorn to the post.

Following the arrival of Boxthorn, looking fit to run, Hurley announced that Boxthorn alone would carry the green and white silks in quest of the Kentucky

U. S. Davis Cup Defeat Seen By Vines

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Calif., May 9.—Henry Ellsworth Vines, jr., home from a professional tennis tour, took a squint at the Davis Cup picture today and decided the United States Team would have a tough time getting past Australia in its quest for the international trophy held by England.

"The United States Team," said Vines, former world's singles champion, "has just about an even chance to defeat the Australians, and, should it do this, the prospects of it beating the British are exceedingly remote."

Vines doesn't give the team from "down under" any the better of it should it beat the Yankees and meet the defenders.

"I would say that Jack Crawford can beat both Wilmer Allison and Sidney Wood and the way the Australian doubles combination of Adrian Quist and Vivian McGrath went against Allison and John Ryn when we were down there several years ago there is a chance that they might be beaten.

As a matter of fact, Vines still is convinced it would be better to use the youthful California team of Donald Budge and Gene Mako, which worked so well through the tournaments last year.

"Budge and Mako," Vines pointed out, "will have gained considerable experience against China and Mexico and the fact that they are to play in the Wimbledon championships before the interzone finals with Australia should help to season them for the rest of the Davis Cup matches.

"As the team stacks up now, I am convinced it will be too much for Allison to play in both the singles and doubles events."

Annapolis, Md., May 9.—The tennis team of Virginia Polytechnic Institute easily defeated St. John's College here today, 7 to 2, taking four of the six strings of singles and all three doubles matches.

Canzoneri Foe Of Ambers Tonight

Rival Is 9-to-5 Favorite to Take Title Before 19,000 in N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Admittedly past his prime, Tony Canzoneri, one of the greatest of the lightweights, still can make history in his division tomorrow night battling young Lou Ambers, of Herkimer, N. Y., 15 rounds for the class championship in Madison Square Garden's final show of the indoor boxing season.

Not since Jack McAuliffe set himself up as lightweight champion half a century ago, starting a line that continued through such ring heroes as Battling Nelson, Joe Gans, Kid Lavigne, Freddy Welch, Willie Richie and Benny Leonard, has a titleholder ever regained his crown once he lost it.

Won Title in 1930.

Still young in years but old in the ring with 125 fights behind him, Canzoneri first won the lightweight title from Al Singer on a one-round knockout in September of 1930, and held it until Barney Ross beat him in Chicago in June of 1933. During his three-year reign, though he lost several overweight matches, he was at his best when the title was at stake and he had to turn back the likes of Jackie Kid Berg, Billy Petrolle, and Kid Chocolate.

Wealthy now, a gentleman farmer most of the time on his Pleasant Acres up near Marlboro, N. Y., Tony has nothing much left to seek from the ring except the final honor of becoming the first man in the history of the division to regain his throne. He got the chance through the abdication of Barney Ross, who pleaded that he could no longer make the weight and preferred anyway to duel Jimmy McLarnin for the welterweight championship.

Ambers Is Favorite.

The New York State Athletic Commission set up Ambers, young, busy, just starting on the trail that is almost ended for Tony, as the man to be whipped before a new champion could be crowned.

Ambers today was quoted a 9-to-5 favorite, with the prospect that the Garden would seat close to its 19,000 capacity tomorrow night with gate receipts up around $50,000. Both have trained well for the duel and flashed spectacularly in their final tune-up bouts. Canzoneri flattened Eddie Zivic in Pittsburgh, and Ambers, a cutting puncher, stopped Honey Boy Hughes in Providence, R. I.

Veterans Gain Woodmont's Semifinals

Peacock to Face Burnett; Harry Pitt to Oppose Hickman Greene.

FOUR seasoned campaigners, young though they be, will battle this morning in the semifinals of the Woodmont Country Club Invitation Golf Tournament.

Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, Maryland State amateur champion, will face a clubmate, Volney Burnett, at 10:10, and Harry Pitt, the Manor Moose, who has won all the invitations in this section, will oppose his Manor pal, Hickman Greene, at 10:15.

These four young golfers won their matches yesterday in impressive fashion. Peacock eliminated stocky Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood, 3 and 2, in a morning duel, and then shot 13 holes in one under par to blast out a victory over Left-handed Sam Rice, also of Indian Spring, 7 and 6.

Burnett Easy Victor.

Burnett didn't have a bit of trouble in his two matches. First to fall victim was J. A. O'Brien, Georgetown University golfer, who lost by 6 and 5. Burnett walloped Claude Rippy, ranking municipal player 5 and 4, in the afternoon. Never down to Rippy, Burnett finished the battle 1 over par, for a surprise rout.

Pitt's victories were achieved at the expense of Levi Yoder, of Indian Spring, 3 and 2, and Dr. W. F. Hayes, unattached, who tied for medal with Peacock, Green and Burnett. Dr. Hayes bowed out, 5 and 4, as the Manor ace, commanding a 3-up lead at the turn, was only 1 over par while the match lasted.

Greene took S. J. Parks, unattached, easily, 6 and 4, in the morning and then won a thriller, 2 and 1, from Beaver Dam's champion, Ed-

Varden, Jones, Hagen Head Sarazen's List

By Dave Herman.

GENE SARAZEN told capacity crowds at his Hecht Co. moving picture lectures yesterday that there have been only three great golfers in the last four decades.

Harry Vardon had no equal in the first generation, Walter Hagen was king of the second, and that Atlanta fellow, Bob Jones, domlnated the third, the bronzed Italian star said.

And before garrulous Gene could take a deep breath, some wise guy barked out:

The quick-witted Sarazen fired back:

"To the new generation. Heck, I'm only 33."

Sarazen told his audience that Vardon, the Englishman, invented the grip which makes it possible for us to swing a club correctly—the overlapping. But that he (Sarazen) doesn't use it.

"Although I employ the overlocking because I'm short and have strong hands, I recommend the Vardon grip," he declared.

"The overlapping is comfortable and easy to adjust. The interlocking is tough. I must get power out of my shots, and the interlocking is best suited to such. You say Francis Ouimet used the interlocking with great results? True—but Ouimet might have won six or

Nats Stopped By Detroit Weather

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, May 9.—They toiled not, neither did they spin, but the Nats today found idleness a gainful pursuit. As they lazed in their hotel here, they moved into the first division without moving a muscle. The cockeyed results of their unemployment came in the form of Cleveland's defeat of the Yankees, who surrendered fourth place to the Nats.

Here in the Tigers' lair, Washington and Detroit attempted to stage their opening game of the series, but the weather man shooed both clubs off the field with his moist delivery. It seems, however, that he was just having his little joke.

The pitching program originally scheduled for today has been thoroughly revised for tomorrow's game by Managers Bucky Harris and Mickey Cochrane. Harris will start Bump Hadley on the mound instead of Burke, and Cochrane has replaced Al Crowder with the left-handed rookie sensation, Ed Sullivan, in an effort to capitalize on the presence of the six southpaw hitters in the Washington line-up.

Wes Ferrell Is Master Of Chisox

Cronin Leads the Attac' With Home Run and Single.

Tribe Blanks Yanks to Gain First Place on Percentage Basis.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 9.—The White Sox fell from first place today as Wes Ferrell shut them out until the ninth inning and his Boston mates battered two of their younger pitchers, Les Tietje and Vernon Kennedy, for 15 hits and a 10-to-1 victory.

The defeat, first in 11 home games this season, ended the Chicagoans' 3-day possession of first place on a percentage basis, but they remained a half game ahead of Cleveland in games won and lost.

Ferrell, the first opposing starting pitcher to go the route at Comiskey Park this year, allowed eight hits and five walks, but his slow stuff had the Sox sluggers popping ineffectual flies with runners on base. Twelve Sox players were stranded on the paths.

Cronin Clouts Homer.

Manager Joe Cronin, with a sixth-inning homer with none on and a single, led the Red Sox attack that included, besides the homer, a triple and five doubles for a total of 25 bases.

Tietje, second-year right-hander, was in trouble from the third inning when, after Rick Ferrell's double and two passes loaded the bases, Manager Jimmie Dykes' fumble of Werber's grounder started the Red Sox on their way.

Doubles by Rick Ferrell and Dahlgren added another run in the fourth, Cronin's homer made it 3 to 0 in the sixth and a barrage of five hits scored three runs and removed Tietje in the seventh.

Gooch Forsakes Nashville Team

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., May 9.—John B. Gooch, former Pittsburgh, Brooklyn and Cincinnati catcher, in the National League, said today he was "through playing baseball for Nashville."

Gooch declined to comment on his differences with the management of the Nashville Vols of the Southern Association.

"There has been no argument," he replied to a question. He added, however, he would not accompany the Vols to New Orleans, where they open a series tomorrow.

Manager Frank Brazill, of the Nashville Club, could not be located for a statement.

The Stag II Falls After Leading

Cold Punch Is Second; Double Pays Betters Only $30 for $2.

By the Associated Press.

PIMLICO, Md., May 9.—Mrs. T. H. Somerville, Virginia sportswoman, finished the winner of the Billy Barton Steeplechase, a testing gallop of 3 miles over 19 fences, which served as the principal event at Pimlico course of the Maryland Jockey Club here this afternoon.

Represented by the veteran timber topper, Wild Son, the black horse showed a clever performance under 159 pounds and conquered the best leapers in training when C. K. Bassett's excellent horsemanship brought the Somerville racer to the conclusion of the gallop a half dozen lengths in advance of Mrs. Jock Whitney's Cold Punch. Third was taken by Mrs. H. C. Fair's Massapequa, as he completed the journey four lengths behind the Whitney starter and showed the way to What Have You and Our Friend.

The lone casualty came to The Stag II, owned by Richard K. Mellon, who came a cropper at the eighteenth fence when he tossed his rider, W. Burling Cocks. At the time of his mishap The Stag II was showing the way to the ultimate winner and he appeared destined for brackets until his misfortune took place. It was a sad blow to the talent, as the Mellon color bearer was highly regarded and had but one more jump to clear before reaching the finish. Several soggy spots on the jumping course mitigated against fast time being recorded but the event proved thrilling.

Fluffy Lee Takes First.

Jockey J. Gilbert and Fluffy Lee completed the winning combination to account for the opening event of the afternoon and the triumph of Mrs. C. W. Williams' miss was in the nature of a mild surprise when she led for every step of the 9-furlong journey to score in a drive. Paying $12.50, the winner led home Yellow Metal, another lightly considered entrant, while third was taken by the disappointing Bright Bird.

Eleven of the better grade juveniles contested the 4½-furlong sprint that served as the second event. In this the A. G. Vanderbilt silks were seen in another victory, the twentieth of the season, when Speed, under the capable handling of L. Fallon, led throughout the intermediate dash to score in handy fashion. Reaching the finish two lengths before Piccolo, the latter barely succeeded in slipping through on the inside to gain the place verdict by a nose over Beth Bon. Speed paid $11.70.

Daily Double Pays $30.

The first successful choice of the afternoon made good when Hiatus under a powerful ride by J. Gilbert scored brackets over ten other 2-year-olds in the third number that was again decided over the 4½ furlong route. Favored in the speculation and a strong factor in the early racing, Hiatus drew abreast of Shyno, the early leader, and in a stubborn drive was up right at the end to receive a nose decision. Lovely Girl chased the pair home with Canrock before the others. Hiatus backers received $5.30.

Star Porter, heavily backed, carried the silks of R. Parr to his second victory of the present meeting and took account of the best unmber decided over the main track when he sped 6 furlongs in 1:12 2-5 to score in the fifth number that was termed the Sagamore.

The biggest upset of the matinee occurred with the running of the sixth number, another event that brought out sprinters to test their speed at 6 furlongs. In this the surprise was furnished by Spixi, when in a driving finish after alternating in setting the pace with Chirac, the J. U. Gratton racer drove over the line a length before Blessed Again, with third falling to Red Badge. Spixi had the services of Jockey E. Arcado and paid 14 to 1.

Another favorite fell by the wayside when Zembla, lukewarm choice for the 9 furlongs of the seventh number, failed her supporters and finished unplaced in the field of eight that contested the issue.

In the day's finale, Hut was home first, followed by Stall Man and Black Falcon.

SPEED, quick to begin, moved into a clear lead immediately, displayed good ability in the footing and had something in reserve at the end. PICCOLO secured racing room on the inside during the stretch drive and closed well after being outrun early. BETH BON raced strongly from the start and held on gamely under a stout drive. ANEROID was in the thick of contention from the beginning and continued determinedly. SANTAN forced to race on the inside throughout, weakened during the closing furlong. CONQUER came with a bold rush and finished in very close quarters. BROWBEATEN went evenly. The others were outrun.

HIATUS, rushed hard to secure a forward position, responded willingly after engaging the pacemaker and under a hard drive was up at the end. SHYNO began quickly, displayed good speed, then held on courageously under strong urging. LOVELY GIRL came on hard a lot of ground entering the home stretch and closed resolutely while finishing in the softer footing. CANROCK raced forwardly and had no excuses. APPLE TODDY could not threaten. OTWAY was outrun. MERSAN was unable to enter contention. PACKAGE was away poorly and had no chance. ROYAL CUNNING unseated his rider when the start came.

WILD SON, nicely handled and rated back of the leaders for the first 2 miles, moved up strongly when placed to pressure, took an easy lead at the eighteenth fence where Mr. Cocks hit the ground. He then was steadied for the remainder of the journey. COLD PUNCH improved his position gamely in the last mile and closed willingly under stout pressure. MASSAPEQUA gradually bettered his position, but was held safe in the closing drive. WHAT HAVE YOU wore OUR FRIEND down after the mile and one-half, but tailed to stay when hard urged. OUR FRIEND weakened badly after 2 miles. THE STAG II was poorly handled and almost unseated his rider at several fences. He finally lost his rider at the eighteenth jump.

STAR PORTER sprinted into an easy lead after a half mile, saved ground entering the home stretch and held away until the end. SUN MONK, urged along in the early racing, responded to pressure, but could not menace the winner after displacing WISE SISTER. Latter raced stoutly in the early stages, but weakened during the closing drive. HILLTOWN raced on the outside from the beginning, THURSDAY was unable to reach a contending position at any stage. THE MAULER had speed for a half mile.

SPIXI, going strongly from the beginning, held to a position close to the pacemaker after being displaced, wore CHIRAC down midway of the home stretch and had enough left to stall off BLESSED AGAIN. Latter, slow to settle in her stride, finished with a bold rush in the final drive. RED BADGE went prominently and fought it out gamely in the closing issue. PRETTY NIGHT was making up ground after being outrun. CHIRAC had too much taken out of him to gain command and he stopped badly after reaching the home stretch. CURRANTS had no excuses. ADAMS EVE weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. The Suffolk Downs (second division). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:31. GLORITONE, sent into early contention and saving ground while on the inside, responded strongly when reaching the home stretch and withstood a drive gamely to set up in the last sixteenth. DUNFERN, badly outrun, came with a rush through on the inside while bettering his position and finished strongest of all. BARBIZON was rated in front until challenged, then held on willingly. ZEMBLA, as usual slow to set going, lost much ground while being taken wide, and then failed to rally during the final drive. AIRWAY went within striking distance of the leaders, but could not gain when hard urged. REPEAL tired in the closing drive.

HUT, permitted to settle in full stride before moving into contention, challenged strongly approaching the home stretch, came on the inside of the pacemaker and was up in the last 50 yards. STALL MAN rated in front after outrunning his field to the first turn, bore out badly entering the home stretch after moving clear, then weakened right at the end. BLACK FALCON went prominently and held on well after making a bold move leaving the back stretch. POLO BAR was never able to threaten. SMEAR went well for six furlongs, then failed to rally when saving much ground. LUCULENT raced in dull fashion. ENTHUSIAST had speed for six furlongs.

Mrs. Hoffman's Alston Dominates Horse Show on Opening Day

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, May 9.

BEFORE Buddy Myer left the Nats' hotel for the ball park in St. Louis Tuesday he received one of the new-fangled chain letters requesting he mail $1 to the owner of the name listed at the top . . . if Myer failed, the writer said, bad luck would befall him and there was no telling what grief he would bring upon himself . . . Buddy tore the letter up and a few hours later had made four straight hits, the last of which was a home run . . . he'd like to get some more mailing lists . . . Jake Powell, Heinie Manush, Jack Russell and Cliff Bolton are also recipients of the chain letters . . . somebody must have known Manush is the highest-salaried gent on the club . . . his letter called for a 10-buck remittance . . . by some optimistic guy from Dubuque, Iowa.

POVICH.

Five American League clubs are bidding for Outfielder Sammy West, of the Browns . . . but Manager Hornsby refuses to sell, realizing that West is the only big leaguer in his outfield . . . The Red Sox, who paid a quarter-million for Joe Cronin to bolster the left side of their infield that didn't need bolstering, offered the Browns only $12,000 for Second Baseman Oscar Melllilo, whose addition might win the pennant for them . . . Clark Griffith is talking trade with the Browns with an eye to acquiring Pitcher Buck Newsom, but Hornsby is not interested in Outfielder Fred Schulte, whose leg, Hornsby suspects, is showing no improvement rapidly . . . Schulte's promising big league career was marred from the day he collided with Heinie Manush when both were playing in the St. Louis outfield.

The $35,000 yearly which the Browns receive from the Cardinals as ground rent for Sportsman's Park aids in keeping the team solvent . . . Another item from which the Browns benefit is the fact that they are the lowest-salaried club in the league . . . Sammy West's annual wage is tops . . . Rogers Hornsby threatens to insert himself into the line-up if Third Baseman Harlan Clift does not emerge from his hitting slump . . . Hornsby, who had slowed to the pace of a rheumatic snail when he ended his active career three years ago, will operate on the theory that he will drive in more runs than he'll let in as a third baseman.

OUTFIELDER FREDDIE SINGTON is hopeful that he will beat the stork to the Sington homestead in Chevy Chase . . . The Jack Russells anticipate their event in June . . . Cecil Travis is the only bachelor among the Nats' regulars . . . from the day that Travis learns to pull his hits into right field, he'll blossom as a .360 hitter . . . but Manager Bucky Harris is reluctant to change Travis' batting style . . . the kid is a late swinger, thus getting his hits into left field where they rarely enable a runner on first to take two bases on a single, but late-swinging is the secret of Travis' success . . . he says any time a left-handed hitter pulls a ball to right field he is attempting to guess the pitcher and is not taking advantage of the full time allotted the hitter to watch the pitch.

While the Nats were in the East, Bucky Harris made a two-bit wager that Wes Ferrell would not win two games for the Red Sox on their current Western trip . . . Ferrell has lost his first start . . . The Nats admit that he has the best control of any pitcher in the league . . . his fast ball went out when his celebrated sore arm of 1933 came in . . . The league is full of great catchers: Rick Ferrell, of the Red Sox; Bill Dickey, of the Yanks; Mickey Cochrane, of the Tigers; Jimmy Foxx, of the A's, and Rollie Hemsley, of the Browns . . . The Yanks, Nats and Indians are at their worst against left-handed pitching and always meet up with all the southpaws the enemy can muster . . . Whitehill, Stewart, Burke and Pettit lift the Nats into the lead as far as left-handed pitching strength is concerned.

THERE is more betting on baseball in St. Louis than there is on races . . . Tom Kearney quotes prices on all the games in both big leagues each day as soon as the pitching choices are made known . . . The Nats were even money to win both games from the Browns . . . The Tigers, quoted at 8 to 5 before the season started, are now a 5-to-2 shot to win the pennant . . . Kearney is quoting the Yankees and Indians as equal choices at 2 to 1 . . . . You can still get even money that the White Sox won't finish in the first division despite their place at or near the top of the league . . . but you'll have to take less than even money if you want to bet that the Browns will finish in the cellar.

At the Aurora Race Track the other day when cold weather froze out the Nats' game with the White Sox, Bucky Harris bet Earl Whitehill two bits to a buck that he could name the horse that would finish last in a 12-horse field . . . he named Don Tasker and won the bet, the toughest bet in racing . . . Don Tasker ran an even race . . . last all the way . . . Heinie Manush holds two big league records, at least . . . he was the first to be robbed of a home run when they erected the screen in front of the right field bleachers here, and he was the first to be robbed of a homer by the 20-foot addition to the right field fence in Shibe Park.

Omaha Good Enough in Derby, Should Win Preakness, Belief

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 9.—This is certainly a foul and virulent germ I picked up in Louisville. It must have been chartered by the Chamber of Commerce. I shall miss not only the Canzoneri-Ambers fight, but the Preakness as well. This is disappointing. I wanted to go down to Baltimore and listen to the experts bawling "The Filly, The Filly," as I know they will.

The most difficult thing in the world is to cure an expert. Nellie Flag is running in the Preakness, and them as loved little Nell in the Derby will love her in the Preakness, though perhaps with just a slight reservation in passion. After all, there were three horses that didn't do right by our Nell in that there Derby — Omaha, Roman Soldier and Whiskolo.

Only one of these, Omaha, is in the Baltimore race. Something tells me that the Nellie Flag lovers are going to have a little something up on Omaha just for the sake of protection. It is no crime to let a gal make a sucker out of you once, but the same gal, twice in a row approaches reprehensible carelessness.

These philosophies today are being dispensed from bed and may be taken for what they are worth. In the late Kentucky Derby, I selected at random Psychic Bid, Today and Omaha to run in that order. I implored all of you to refrain from wagering thus and I am sure that all of my older clients did. Psychic Bid was selected because of my faith in the racing luck of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane. Today because Sonny Whitney said he would win, and Omaha because I heard a lot of guys talking about the horse. I see that Psychic Bid is running in the Preakness, but I abjure him.

Evidently the racing luck of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane is suggespielt. You can't say that I don't learn. I also have learned to pick Omaha. If he was good enough to beat all those Derby horses he ought stlil to be good enough to beat all the Preakness horses.

I am wondering now whether Lou Ambers can throw off that sparboy complex when he gets up off his chair to fight Tony Canzoneri tomorrow night. It is considerable of a mental hazard to duel a man for a championship when you have once served him in the menial capacity as rehearsal mate and punching bag. There is inborn in every champion a contempt of his exercise boys that eats its way into their souls.

Sparring partners live by themselves, eat by themselves and play by themselves. The champion who employs them remains apart and aloof, and it is a part of his game to do so. He wears a look of disdain during his practice bouts with them in the ring. He is of the people, they are the people paid to serve him.

He thumps them and knocks them at will.

If he permits them the liberty of an occasional buffet, or if he orders them to open up on him, he takes his toll in cruel punches and sharpens up his killer's appetite by punishing those paid receivers. They say, "once a sparring partner, always a sparring partner." It is supposed to leave its brand, and few that I have ever known have become champions.

A sparring partner is supposed to have an exquisite chance to study the style and mannerisms of the champion he is training, but few, if any spar-mates, have the brains to study anything, much less a champion's style. The thing that is graven on most of their minds is

Irish Gelding Takes Two Classes

Miss Walker Is Thrown; Events to Resume at 10 A. M. Today.

By Bill McCormick.

ALSTON, a big hardy hunter of Irish extraction, stole the spotlight at the first day of the National Horse Show at Bradley Farms yesterday.

The 10-year old brown gelding whose pater was Seventy-Five, an aristocratic Irish blueblood which was some shucks as a steeplechaser, and whose mamma was Mayday, just an ordinary horse from the Auld Sod, won three blues and was second in two classes to become the outstanding performer of the day.

Alston, which is owned by Mrs. R. Curzon Hoffman of Owings Mill, Md., won the amateur working hunters class, novice throughbred hunters and ladies working hunters classes from choice fields. The Hoffman gelding captured reds in the qualified or green hunters and open class working hunters. The big brown performed almost perfectly throughout the day and was in top condition by virtue of active hunting three times a week for many weeks past.

Heavy Action Today.

The strong stables of Mrs. John Hay Whitney and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim will not swing into heavy action until today, but the Whitney horses did capture two blues and the Firenze stable one.

Mrs. Whitney's Jericho won the novice hunters and her Bon Diable was first in the qualified or green hunters. Firenze Marokan scored the win for Mrs. Guggenheim by capturing a blue in the open class working hunters, just nosing out Alston.

Betty Couzens' Bean Beetle was piloted to the blue in the modified Olympia and handy hunter classes. Sherwood, a 4-year-old gelding belonging to E. L. Redmon, was awarded first place in the classes for 3 and 4 year olds suitable to become hunters and middle and heavy weight hunters.

No Bad Spills.

No bad spills marred the first day's showings, although Evelyn Walker did come within hailing distance of disaster in the ladies' working hunters class when F. Moran McConihe's Easter Sunday refused. Miss Walker made a noble effort to save the fall as Easter Sunday rammed over the fence, but after much juggling about in the saddle she finally came a cropper. She was not seriously injured, and remounted to complete the course. Easter Sunday previously had unseated Ralph Brotherton twice in the handy hunters class.

A goodly sized crowd, which included most of the Capital's social leaders, was present yesterday. The second day of the show gets under way at 10:30 a. m. today, and activities on the third and final day will begin at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Horse Bankrupt; To Run On Credit

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., May 9.—Circuit Judge Burrell H. Farnsley gave his approval today to Exponent, a thoroughbred in receivership, giving the creditors a run for their money in the first race at Churchill Downs tomorrow.

For the time being the destinies of Exponent and several other thoroughbreds are presided over by the court because the Cattell Stables are in receivership. The court also approved the entry of Golden Bay in the second race Saturday.

W. & L. Defeats Georgetown Nine, 7-5

Breaks Deadlock in Ninth; Early Lead of Hoyas Is Overcome.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THE "G" men lost their quarry yesterday afternoon—lost him in a flurry of errors in the ninth inning, and when they again picked up his trail it led to home plate and the first of two runs that enabled Washington and Lee to win from Georgetown, 7-5, in a close game at the Hilltop.

The "G" men, alias the Hilarious Hilltoppers, turned in one of their best games of the season, but an injury to Al Perrine, regular first baseman, and the old urge to err, nullified their efforts, and, incidentally, another good chukking job turned in by Ed Hargaden.

It was 5-all as Pullen opened Washington and Lee's half of the ninth with a whistling single to left that was the beginning of the "G" men's downfall. It was apparent that he had the urge to move up a peg, so Joe Saverine called for a pitch-out. It was a perfect move, but Saverine was slow in getting his peg to second and Pullen was safe.

Workman to Ride Bradley Entrant

sportsman's victory in the historic race. Black Helen turned in a sensational workout this morning, going 1¼ miles in 2:10 3-5, and it was thought she would be a certain starter.

The hopes of Bradley received a setback, however, when the Maryland State Racing Commission announced Don Meade, the stable's first-string jockey, would be ineligible to ride as the result of a five-day suspension received at Churchill Downs yesterday for rough riding. Meade suffered the same fate two years ago, when he was not permitted to ride Brokers Tip after being suspended following his stretch battle with Herb Fischer in the Kentucky Derby. Raymond (Sonny) Workman, of Washington, one of the turf's foremost jockeys, will replace Meade.

Omaha Seen Choice.

Although the 1 3-16 miles of the Preakness is one-sixteenth mile shorter than the Derby, the stretches are shorter and the turns sharper than the Downs. Omaha was expected to rule the even-money choice. If successful, he will be the fourth horse in history to win both the Derby and Preakness, Sir Barton, Gallant Fox and Burgoo King, having previously turned the trick.

Omaha pleased his trainer, "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, by breezing 1⅛ miles in 1:58 1-5, after going the mile in 1:44 1-5.

"He is as ready as he was last week," said Fitzsimmons. "He'll be a tough horse to beat."

Nellie Flag, seeking to follow in the footsteps of her dam, Nellie Morse, winner of the 1924 Preakness, stepped 5 furlongs in 1:08. Commonwealth went a mile in 1:50, while Firethorn, which will carry the colors of Walter M. Jeffords, breezed a mile in 1:49 2-5.

Walters Stops Cards As Phillies Win, 2 to 1

Philadelphia, May 9 (AP).—Bucky Walters, the lad Jimmy Wilson imported from third base to do mound duty, turned in a fine job of stopping the champion St. Louis Cardinals today, and behind his four-hit pitching the Phillies won the series opener, 2 to 1.

A single by Mickey Haslin, reserve second baseman, with two away in the ninth, scored Walters with the winning run and gave the twirling recruit from third base his first win since he was switched at the start of the season.

Action as Deacons Snapped G. W. Streak

Indians Blank Yanks.

Cleveland, May 9 (AP).—The Indians took a short route back to the American League lead today, pasting the Yankees, 5 to 0, in a five-inning game while the White Sox were losing to Boston. That gave Cleveland first place, .733 to .722.

Rain, which had delayed the game once, halted proceedings just as the Yanks came up in the sixth.

Cleveland belted Charley ("Red") Ruffing to cover in three frames, scoring one run in the first and four more in the third, when doubles by Rogell and Hale and A. B. Wright did the damage. Mel Harder granted only three hits and struck out six, fanning the side in the fifth.

Dismer, McGann Bird Takes 250-Mile Race

One of the closest finishes recorded this season marked the finish of the Washington Pigeon Club's 250-mile race from Pulaski, Va., won by a bird from the loft of Dismer and McGann.

The victor covered the distance at a speed of 1,132 yards per minute, while a carrier from the loft of William Seymour winged home at a rate of 1,130 yards per minute. Each loft was limited to five birds.

Hubbell Checks Bucs; Blanton Is Beaten

Giants Triumph, 3 to 1, as Pirate Rookie Gives Up Five Passes.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Carl Hubbell and the New York Giants today put an abrupt halt to the winning streak of the sensational Darrel (Cy) Blanton, rookie pitching ace of the Pittsburgh Pirates and precocious aspirant for King Carl's screwball title.

Thanks to Hubbell's highly effective work in the pinches and Hank Leiber's ability to solve Blanton's puzzling delivery with men on bases, the Giants continued unbeaten this season on their home grounds. The score was 3 to 1.

Blanton, unbeaten in four previous starts and with two shutouts to his credit, was the victim of his own wildness as well as poor support. Cy struck out six, running his total to 36, but issued five passes and yielded eight hits.

At that, only one of New York's runs was earned and Blanton matched everything Hubbell had except control. Cy had the Giants looking foolish frequently with his overhand assortment of screw balls and "downers." Including today's game, Blanton still has the best earned-run average in the league, with a mark of 0.80 per nine innings.

marvel at the ground crew's work with the tarpaulin, inasmuch as there was still some doubt if it was going to rain for keeps. Apparently it wasn't, because five minutes later the ground crew wrapped the tarpaulin right up again and the players started for their positions. It had stopped raining.

Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges, the big shots of the Tiger staff, have a combined record of four victories and six defeats. Al Crowder has won a game and lost one, and Fred Marberry and Eldon Auker have yet to score a victory. All in all, as the saying goes, their pitching has not been very good at all, at all.

Al Schacht held a reunion with his former mates here today after being discharged from a local hospital, where he was confined for nearly a wee kwith a digestive disorder. He entrained tonight to join the Red Sox at Chicago.

Schacht reported that Joe Cronin has not made an error since the three-game debacle against the Nationals in Boston, but the sad part of it is that Cronin hasn't made a hit, either.

Goose Goslin, the former right-field landmark in Griffith Stadium, who has never been accused of being baseball's profoundest scholar, today advanced a striking argument to support his contention that the White Sox will not hold their American League lead for long.

"They're not much of a ball team," said Goslin. "They have quite a few good players, but only nine of 'em can play at the same time. Understand what I mean?"

Personally, I didn't get the drift.

G. W. Is Blasted In One-Sided Ball Game

Wake Forest Ruins Winning Streak by 14-3 Victory.

A HARD-HITTING Wake Forest nine made the George Washington boys say "uncle" while separating them from a four-game winning streak in a decidedly one-sided game yesterday on the Ellipse. The final score was 14-3.

Bill Tarver, who on his last appearance in the box for the Colonials, turned in a nice relief performance against West Virginia, started against the Deacons, but faile dto finish the first inning. Tarver was as baffling as a first-grade arithmetic problem and after passing three men and pitching a single to the fourth, was yanked for Vince DeAngelis.

Gold, with four hits, including a double, led the winning attack. Artie Dale connected for a home run, pinch hitting for Melpolder in the seventh inning.

Roosevelt Nine Choice Over Western Today

Both Teams Will Revise Line-ups

Cleary and Bovello Due to Pitch in Contest on Eastern Field.

By John R. Vosburgh.

SEVERAL changes in the appearances of the Western and Roosevelt High line-ups will be noticeable this afternoon when Coach Cliff Moore throws a reinforced battalion of Westerners against the rollicking Ruff Riders in a more or less desperate effort to check their rivals rampaging drive toward the inter-high championship.

Victor over a favored Central team, 11 to 3, in its only series start, Roosevelt will take the field at Eastern at 3:30 o'clock a heavy favorite to turn back the Georgetowners, who lost their opening game to Tech, 14 to 7.

While their prospects of victory clearly fall far short of matching their bright red sox, the Westerners will enter the game bolstered by some much-needed reinforcements. Gerald Burns, a fast infielder, and Paul Borden, a well-rated outfielder, have been recently made eligible and will be in the starting line-up, Burns replacing the Cuban, Rafael Cabrera, and Borden taking the place of Harry Wells in right field.

To Plug Vacancies.

Roosevelt was harder hit by the new advisory rulings than its opponent, but has material available for plugging the vacancies. Catcher Julius Lewis, who led the Roosevelt attack against Central with three hits, is off the squad, as is Jimmy Woodward, regular shortstop. The loss of both is offset, however, by the return of Catcher Frank Baroni to action after a siege with the German measles, and the new eligibility of young Sherwood Robinson, brother-in-law of Joe Cronin, who will take over the short field job.

While Tech and Eastern suffered no losses when the new marks came in, Central has been substantially weakened. Babe De Pretoro, hard-hitting outfielder; Angelo Valenza, regular second baseman, and "Gump" Morris, fast-ball pitcher, all failed to hurdle classroom obstacles.

Kinsman May Hurl.

Ted Kinsman, veteran Western right-hander, has been inactive for a week with asthma, but may get today's mound assignment, Coach Moore said. Dan Cleary, who checked Central over the last six innings with but four hits, is a logical pitching choice, with Bob Rafferty, a fast-developing sophomore, as a possible alternative.

Joe Bovello, the former catcher, who set back Central with six hits, will again get the mound call for Roosevelt. The Ruff Riders will bring a double-edged battery into play, for Baroni is as good a pitcher as he is a catcher. Coach Lynn Woodworth, Roosevelt athletic director, will be on the Ruff Rider bench. Coach Leonard Brown will be engaged in his duties as instructor of cadets.

that thus and so and in such and such a manner did they acquire their lickings before and that they are very likely to get it again the same way.

Inasmuch as it is part of a sparring partner's job not to look too good and to run second to his employer, he builds up a defeatist attitude whether he realizes it or not. I have a feeling that somewhere in Ambers, the would-be champion, Canzoneri, may find lurking his old servant tomorrow night. It may come in right handy.

I often wonder at the life of a sparring partner, and what a little private hell it must be. Here not even the manly art of self-defense comes to your aid, because the man training for a fight is looking for self-delusion as well as exercise.

To offer him resistance and skilled opposition is to lower his self-confidence and earn discharge. The fee of $20 a day, three meals, and, likely as not, a place on the fight cards for an extra $200 or $300 dollars. And so sore noses, split lips, bent ribs and what not are to be suffered each day. Deliberate openings are to be made so that the master can train himself to take advantage of them.

They must keep a delicate hair-line balance of pseudo-efficiency. If they are too good and make the man training for the fight look bad, out they go. And if they are too weak, and succumb too easily to a poke to the wind or a cuff on the chops, out they go too, as not doing the champion any good.

Some of them wind up as court jesters, charity cases on the spar staffs of champions, to be used for a round of clowning to amuse the customers. Assuredly, of all professions that have no future, sparring partner leads them all.

Griffith Watches Rogers, of Virginia

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 9.—Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Nationals, today had a good picture of Orlin Rogers, star University of Virginia southpaw, who subdued the Naval Academy baseball team, 1 to 0, yesterday.

Griffith came over from Washington to scout the Virginia hurler. After watching the Cavalier strike out eight Navy batters in the first three innings, the Washington owner said he had seen enough and left.

Rogers, in the nine innings, fanned 17, including every member of the Navy team, allowed only two singles, one by Buzz Borries, of football and basket ball fame; got two hits himself and scored the winning run in the fourth inning.

die Bean. The Greene-Bean match was the tightest of the afternoon. Bean blew his chances by three-putting the short seventeenth, as Greene got down in par figures.

Seven Pars, Two Birdies.

Rice was no match for Peacock, who collected seven pars and two birdies on the first nine to go out in 33, 2 under, and stand 7-up. Peacock swung a deadly putter against Rice, the reformed baseball star. He would have played every hole in perfect figures or better had he not been stymied by a tree on his drive on the first hole, where he took a five.

In the consolations of the first flight Louis Fuchs defeated O'Brien on the twenty-second hole.

L. J. Goode, Columbia golfer, competing in the third flight, ended his match with Lou Harris, of Woodmont, by holing out a 40-foot chip shot near a tree on the nineteenth hole.

seven opens and amateurs had he started out with the overlapping."

And as for the Haig (Hagen), Gene said:

"He is the greatest putter that ever lived. Jones is the best approach putter. Haig putts like this (he demonstrates), keeping his blade in a straight line with the ball, low to the ground. His backswing is short, but there's magic in his follow through. And Jones—oh yes! He brings his putter far back high off the turf. By the way, I've lost thousands of dollars putting like Hagen and against him. Laugh that off."

Sarazen also blasted the theory that the left hand starts the club back.

"That's bunk, in my opinion," Gene said. "I've my own theory, the practical one. Draw the club back with the thumb and second finger of your right hand. Keep your club on a straight line in the direction of the hole. The trouble with a lot of golfers after they reach the top of their swing is that they turn their clubhead in all directions. Go back on a straight line, hit from the inside out—and you can't miss. Of course, you have to follow through, but let the clubhead do the work after it contacts the ball."

In rapid-fire, clear-cut fashion, Sarazen went through the A, B, C's of golf. He started with the driver, wound up with the sand iron. He blasted shot after shot from a specially constructed trap smack into the bull's-eye. No one got hit, no one got sand in his or her eye.

The audience sat spellbound

On parade went that turf rider spoon that made golf history in the Augusta tournament that Gene won—the club that sent the ball 240 yards on its epochal flight into the cup for a double eagle.

"I had a hanging lie when I played that shot," he said. "If it hadn't been for this shallow face I would never have holed out. Look at this face (and he shows, putting the ball next to it): Look how it stands a better chance of getting the ball up than the heavier-faced clubs. From now on you can look for your star pros to use wood clubs with shallow faces."

Sarazen also introduced a new club—an 8½ iron. He says it's going to win two opens for him this year It's the club one needs to play short shots at Oakmont, he claims.

The most valuable club in the bag is the 4 iron, Gene told his audience. "There comes a time when this is the only iron that'll get you home just when trouble lurks."

Piscatorially Speaking

By M. W. Meier.

FRESH-WATER fishing has been more or less at a standstill the past week due to cold weather, high water and an oversupply of natural foods.

Two of the best anglers in the District—men who probably know more about trout and how to catch them than anyone else of our acquaintance—spent all last Sunday fruitlessly whipping stream in the vicinity of Frederick, Md. They never got a rise, and were "skunked," as some term it, for the first time this season. Since the opening of the season, they have fished an average of three days a week.

A number of District anglers have been trying their luck in West Virginia streams and report fair sport. The automobile clubs have last-minute stream reports on West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Blues Providing Sport.

BLUEFISHING off the lower Virginia and upper North Carolina coasts, continues to give anglers no end of thrilling sport. Scores of local fishermen are making the 300-mile journey and we have yet to learn of anyone returning empty-handed.

Oregon Inlet is the mecca for thees anglers, but at this season practically every mile of the lower Virginia and Carolina coast line is providing sport that is far above one's fondest expectations. The run of these fish is little less than phenomenal. Not in many years have they been seen in such numbers or of such average large size. Even blase commercial fishermen have expressed amazement at the huge schools.

Trolling seems to bring the biggest fish, but the surf casters aren't complaining, for they are getting their share of fish that range from 2 to 10 pounds. As we have said before, surf casting is one of the finest sports in this world, and no fishing education is complete until it is tried.

If you want to know more about surf casting and what equipment to use, we urge that you read Van Campen Heilner's book, "The Call of the Surf." You will find it at the library.

The blues ought to be in the Chesapeake in a fortnight. If you can't wait until then, you won't regret the 300-mile drive to Wachese. Take the night boat to Norfolk. If you prefer, and cut off 200 miles or more. Boats are at a premium now, and you'd better long-distance a reservation. Otherwise you will have to do your fishing from the beach.

Be Reasonable!

THIS blue fish run is so unusual that many anglers are unconsciously making fish "hogs" of themselves. Unfortunately, there are no bag limits on salt-water fishing and party after party seems to be commercializing something which should be regarded as a sport.

A freshly caught bluefish is about as tasty a thing as we have ever eaten, but age doesn't help them any more than it does any other fish. If you must catch all you can, take a wooden candy pail or two along and after filleting them (stripping off the meat by running a sharp knife along the back and belly), pack them down in salt. They can also be smoked or put down in brown sugar. The Bureau of Fisheries issues a fine little pamphlet on the subject of home-curing fish.

Bay Fishing Fair.

THERE are plenty of hardheads and small rock in the Chesapeake right now, but few anglers have tried for them. Sunday will see parties in the neighborhood of Cobb and Solomons Islands and if the weather is passable, they should have fair luck.

We have been reliably informed that trout fishing is decent now at Wachapreague. We have never been there ourselves, but hope to try it out this week-end. What we are really after are channel bass and to learn at first hand whether any blues are up that far.

IT doesn't seem possible, but the Bureau of Fisheries is responsible for the statement that 329 women in the United States list their profession as either forestry or fishing.

There was a time when a man had to drag his wife out on a fishing trip and he further spoiled things by providing her with a cast-off outfit he would be ashamed to use himself. Today, women are going in for angling in unbelievable numbers and when they choose an outfit they pick the best.

The American Museum of Natural History has a women curator in charge of ichthyology. Mrs. Oliver Grinnel, famous deep-sea angler, is now president of the Salt Water Anglers Association. The new Black Bass and Anglers Division of the Bureau of Fisheries has a departmental appointee who can outcast a heap of men. She is Miss Esther Dodd and I'm told she knows more about fish than she does face powders.

Little to Oppose Parker First Day

By the Associated Press.

Lytham St. Annes, England, May 9.—Right from the very start, husky William Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, will see action in his defense of the British amateur golf championship, which starts May 20.

Less fortunate than three of his fellow countrymen here to compete in the golden jubilee of the championship, Little failed to receive a first-round bye and will meet T. H. Parker, of Fairhaven, in the opening round.

All told, the field of 232 includes 12 players from the United States. Nine, including Little, today were matched against opponents for the first round, while the others will not go into action until Tuesday, May 21.

New Diamond To Open at Ballston

Team to Dedicate Field in Herndon Game Sunday.

WALTER RUDING'S fast-traveling Ballston Team, which will be satisfied with nothing less than The Post Association title in the Northern Virginia League, will dedicate its new baseball field Sunday in its league battle against the fast Herndon nine. Its playing field nicely graded and inclosed all 'round with a stout fence, the new Ballston diamond is an object of real pride on the part of the players and rooters alike. It is equipped with comfortable "dugouts" for the players and seating accommodations for about 1,000 spectators.

Roy S. Braden, county manager of Arlington County, and James Buchanan, president of the Virginia loop, will be among the throng of fans who are expected to turn out for Sunday's battle with Herndon. Ballston's hurling selection will be made from Lem Owen, Calvin Hull and Jim Duff, all of whom were pitching ball when most of their teammates were still in the cradle. The diamond is located on the Wilson boulevard just past Clarendon.

Saturday night will be the deadline for National City League teams to add new names to their eligibility lists for the first half of league play, it was announced by Vic Gauzza, president.

The Gaithersburg Independents will engage the Rockville nine tomorrow at 2:45 on the latter's diamond.

After an absence of eight years, the Bankers Baseball League has again been organized and will open its season on May 20. Twelve teams, necessitating a division into sections, will strive for Post Association honors in the newly formed loop. In one group are nines from the Hamilton, Metropolitan, Lincoln, City and Second National banks and W. B. Hibbs Co. In the other section are the Bank of Commerce & Savings, Union Trust, American Security, National Savings & Trust Co., Riggs National and Munsey Trust Co.

Bruce Baird was elected president of the league at the recent organization meeting. The other officers are George Earnshaw and Earl Haycock, vice presidents; George Pollock, secretary and official scorer, and Paul Seltzer, treasurer.

Another meeting will be called soon to complete final plans. It is planned to play the games on the Ellipse diamond.

The peewee teams, entered in the Columbian League, will meet tonight at 7 o'clock at 126 Webster street northwest, apartment 3. Managers of teams in that class, who wish to register teams in the league, also are requested to attend. Already Webster A. C., Petworth Flashes, Cardinals, Bennings and Woodridge Bears are entered in the competition. All teams competing in the league play will be awarded trophies or prizes, according to Joe Cohen, loop president. Any boy who has reached his fourteenth birthday before June 1 is not eligible to play in this class.

A game for Saturday is sought by the North Washington nine on the North Washington diamond. For final arrangements call Georgia 1359.

Clarendon A. C. is anxious to book a game for Saturday. Phone Clarendon 157.

Admiral Taussig, U. S. N.; Maj. Gen. Commandant Russell, U. S. M. C.; Chester Davis, chief administrator of the AAA, and other Government officials will attend the opening game of the Herald Government League between Navy Department and Agricultural Administration at 2:30 o'clock on the East Ellipse diamond. The Navy Band will provide music for the occasion.

The Davis Cleaners are looking for a game with a team having a diamond. Call Manager Harrison at Clarendon 1490 between 8 and 8:30 p. m.

Stocks Forge Further Ahead In Busy Session

Neglected Rails Lead Market in General Rise of Prices.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—Further additions to its gains of the previous session were chalked up by the stock market today, in the third busiest day of trading in 1935.

The bulk of the improvement was of a fractional character, although lifts of a point or so were fairly common among some of the more active equities and many reached new highs for 1935 or longer. Profit realizing early in the day was absorbed in creditable fashion, and the upward course was led by the recently neglected rails.

Some of the carrier stocks registered advances of 1 to 2 points for a time, although by the close the gains had mostly been shaded to less than a point. Oils continued in active demand at rising prices, and were helped along by an advance in gasoline prices in the territory of Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Turnover in the stock exchange rose to 1,653,000 shares, the highest since April 25, when 1,690,070 shares changed hands, and compared with the most active market for the year of 1,909,590 shares on February 18, the day of the Supreme Court gold clause decision. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks was .3 of a point higher at 41.2, and only .4 away from the year's high of 41.6.

Cotton Jumps On Pool Action

Up $1.25 to $1.50 a Bale on Announcement of Futures Purchases.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—New crop cotton positions today rallied $1.25 to $1.50 a bale, following announcement that the cotton producers' pool would purchase futures contracts against sales of spot cotton. At the close old crop deliveries had advanced 10 to 13 points, while later months were 26 to 32 points net higher.

More active buying from Wall street and commission houses centered in the 1936 deliveries on a theory that action by the producers' pool would carry these positions to a premium over nearby months.

The pool manager stated that the purpose was to bring the futures market near to the spot market level and to raise contract prices for new crop months to a more satisfactory level.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firmer today on increased covering and scattered buying, promoted by the strength in cotton, higher lard, firmness of grains and stocks and higher crude oil. Last Month's Total Was Exceeded Only in 1929.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—Total April production of all American automobile makers was the best for any April in the history of the industry save for 1929, the Automobile Manufacturers Association estimated today.

Output for the month was placed at 477,546 units, an increase of 6 per cent over March and of 29 per cent over the same month of last year.

On the basis of this estimate, production for the first four months of the year was 1,591,381 units, up 41 per cent over the first four months of 1934. The estimates were based on reports of factory shipments.

Bank Clearings At High Point For This Year

Increase for 22 Cities Is 21.1 Per Cent Over 1934 Week.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—Bank clearings last week established a new high level for the year and in addition were the largest of any week since the opening period of January, 1932, it was disclosed today.

The total for the 22 leading cities, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, was $6,242,917,000. This was an increase of 21.1 per cent over the $5,157,101,000 reported for the corresponding week last year.

It contrasted with a gain of 7 per cent in the previous week. The volume was $231,703,000 ahead of the preceding week.

New York City clearances were $4,406,137,000, up 20.8 per cent from last year, while the aggregate for other centers was $1,836,780,000, an increase of 21.5 per cent.

"At every city included," said the report, "clearings now exceed those for the same week a year ago, and at a number of these the amount was higher than that reported for any week of the last three years."

The amounts were especially large at Chicago, Detroit, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Louisville, Omaha, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. Chicago clearings were $277,700,000 against $223,200,000 a year ago.

French Gold Losses Drain on Reserves

Paris, May 9 (AP).—The Bank of France today reported losses of 306,000,000 francs during the week ended May 3 as Minister of Finance Louis Germain-Martin gave the nation new assurances the gold standard would be maintained.

Latest losses of gold raised the decrease in the bank's holdings during the past five weeks to 2,000,000,000 francs, leaving 80,626,000,000 francs, the lowest figure since August 3, 1934, in its vaults.

Oil Industry, Enjoying Rising Demand and Higher Prices, Fears Rigid Federal Control of Industry; Urges Interstate Pact Approval as Substitute.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 9.—Recent advances in gasoline prices have placed the petroleum industry as a whole on a more satisfactory earnings basis than for several years past. Furthermore, with "hot oil" production from East Texas down to an estimated 27,000 barrels daily, about the lowest level since the field was opened, prospects for stabilization of conditions appear bright. Rising consumption has permitted a material reduction in gasoline stocks on hand during the past month.

Under the oil code, prices of crude have been maintained at a dollar a barrel for the top grades for well over a year. Late last year, sharp reductions in gasoline prices cut the refiners' margins very sharply, and for a time it appeared that the entire crude price structure would collapse because refiners could not afford to pay prevailing prices. However, strengthening of Federal and State laws applicable to the petroleum industry and more effective operation of the Federal Tender Board which had been set up to stop shipments of "hot oil" in interstate commerce, checked the flood of crude produced in excess of the allotment from East Texas.

With the current rise in gasoline prices, another advance in crude is now actually being discussed. The more conservative elements in the industry warn that this would be an unwise move, however, since it might simulate "hot oil" output anew, while discouraging consumption increases and probably arousing public resentment.

Consumption Rises; Nears 1929 Record Level.

The rising trend in petroleum consumption is regarded as one of the strongest elements in the current situation of the industry. Last year American refineries absorbed 905,000,000 barrels of crude, a gain of more than 5 per cent over 1933. However, last year's crude consumption was still about 8 per cent below the peak of 987,000,000 barrels registered in 1929. During the first quarter of this year, however, crude consumption at refineries has been running about 6 per cent ahead of 1934, owing to a substantial upturn in gasoline sales which began early in February and continues at the present time. Hence, consumption of petroleum for the whole of 1935 will probably be very close to the previous peak in 1929, consumption statistics to date indicate.

Nevertheless, the petroleum industry is deeply concerned about its future. The greatest fear at the moment is that recent Federal intervention in the industry, while it has proved successful in curbing the "hot oil" evil, may prove merely the opening wedge for the gradual introduction of a complete system of Federal control over its activities. Secretary Ickes has expressed the view that the industry should be made a public utility, and executives of petroleum companies have not forgotten it. The Senate Mines and Mining Committee has reported the Thomas bill, which would set up a Federal Petroleum Agency with broad power to intervene and regulate production in any State whenever it exceeds the allowable output of that State as fixed by Government agency, indicating a breakdown in State control.

The American Petroleum Institute favors rather a relaxation of existing Federal regulation of the industry, as a means of reversing the tendency to extend Federal jurisdiction so as to apply the public utility status to petroleum. A restoration of freer marketing conditions is held necessary to maintain the ability of the industry to adjust itself to changing conditions.

Interstate Pact is Favored as Substitute.

The industry favors, as an alternative to more Federal control, continued regulation of output through the interstate compact between Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, New Mexico and Colorado that has already been approved by Legislatures in these five jurisdictions. This agreement provides for allocation of production among these five States, in accordance with indicated market demand and includes no price-fixing provision. The industry favors action by Congress to approve this interstate compact, as well as authorization to the Bureau of Mines to prepare at regular intervals figures upon the national consumptive demand for petroleum to guide the States in enforcing proration of production within their borders under the pact.

Meanwhile, several oil company executives are stressing the point that proration of petroleum production and erratic price movements have combined to slow down the process of discovery and development of new production pools. It is estimated that only 12,000,000, barrels of petroleum are recoverable from present proven fields. At the current rate of consumption this would last about 13 years. Hence, there has been an outburst of activity on the part of several of the companies in leasing new acreage and drilling wells, in order to add to the known reserve of crude oil in the country. Modern methods of geophysical exploration and the deep drilling of wells are being brought into play to facilitate the new active development campaign which is now getting under way in the industry.

N. Y. Trade Board Hits Silver Policy

Will Protest if Study Justifies Fears.

New York, May 9.—The New York Board of Trade at its monthly meeting adopted a resolution which provides for investigation of the effect of the Administration's silver buying policy on our foreign trade and commerce. The resolution follows:

"Resolved, that the New York Board of Trade has noted with increasing concern the so-called silver buying policy of the present Administration of the national Government, with reference to its effect on our foreign trade and commerce, and upon the welfare of friendly nations, whose purchasing power largely governs this country's prosperity.

"Resolved, that this board make inquiry as to such apparently disastrous effects, and if action appears proper and expedient, officially protest against the aforesaid silver buying policy in such manner as the board may deem most effective."

Savings Banks Hold Recovery Is Under Way

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Business recovery is well under way, according to the custodians of 14,000,000 savings accounts now meeting in New York at the three-day convention of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, which began on Wednesday.

The 1,200 delegates to the conclave represent institutions from 18 States and are gathered to discuss problems directly affecting 25 per cent of the active bank deposits in the United States today.

The speed with which business recovery will progress from now on will depend on the amount of political interference it will encounter was stated by the association members, who represent 99¼ per cent of the $10,000,000,000 deposited in mutual savings banks, as well as 97 per cent of all the mutual savings banks in the country.

Public Utilities Look Up.

Public utilities, despite adverse Administration moves, are slated for better times, in the preponderance of opinion. More than $700,000,000 has been invested in utility securities since they became legal investments in 1927.

Railroads, which have accounted for $1,600,000,000 of the mutual funds, may soon have their problems solved, in the opinion of John J. Pelley, head of the Association of American Railroads, and Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Co-ordinator of Railroads.

Henry Bruere, president of the Bowery Savings Bank, of New York, who summed up the railroad outlook from the bank standpoint, ventured substantially the same prediction.

Federal Expenses Discussed.

Colossal Federal expenditures as well as rapidly mounting city and State debts drew a great deal of attention, as member banks have invested a total of nearly $2,000,000,000 in United States Government securities and municipal bonds.

It was reported that the mutual savings banks during the depression have so handled the savings of the depositors that the banks today have a surplus of over $1,000,000,000.

The belief that American prosperity is not far distant; that individualism and the profit system will prevail, and that we are not on the verge of either communism or socialism was expressed by Philip A. Benson, president of the association.

He warned, however, that organized minorities would rob the thrifty and industrious, and by spending staggering sums on relief would so pile up debts that inflation would be threatening.

The following men are listed on the program today: Walter Perry, bank commissioner for Connecticut; Dr. A. J. Stoddard, superintendent of schools of Providence; Dr. David Friday, the economist; Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Robert L. Hogue, vice president, Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, New York; Allan M. Pope, president, First Boston Corporation; Arnold Frye, counsel to the municipal finance commission of New Jersey, and other figures prominent in business and official life.

Judge Rutherford a Director.

Judge John Rutherford, for many years judge of the Virginia Circuit Court and since his retirement a resident of Washington, was unanimously elected a director of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. at the regular monthly directors' meeting.

Scion of an old Virginia family, Judge Rutherford was born and reared in Virginia. He retired several years after a long and distinguished career on the judiciary bench.

The treasurer's statement rendered at the meeting showed that substantial progress had been made during the last month. Resources of the institution at the time of the last condition statement on March 4 aggregated $26,674,392. Deposits on the date of last report aggregated $21,469,752, while cash and reserve of the bank were put at $7,242,322.

Harry G. Meem is president of the institution while Arthur Peter is the vice president and general counsel. John Joy Edson, chairman of the board of directors, presided at the meeting.

Bond Market Specialties Are Day's Features

Speculative Issues Are Strong; Governments Ease Off.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—Loans of the so-called speculative categories found more friends in today's bond market while low-yield issues, generally, were unable to register any progress.

There were some wide advances in various groups, attributed largely to special situations and indications of improving business in these lines. At the same time the trading volume dropped to $11,987,000, par value, compared with $14,860,000 in the previous session. The Associated Press averages were .1 of a point off to .2 higher.

Reports that further refunding programs were being considered were inclined to dampen enthusiasm for the high-grade groups, although weak spots were bare among the relatively high-priced liens.

Some of the U. S. Government securities were fairly active, but the investment appetite for the Federals appeared to have been appeased and declines of 1-32d to 8-32ds of a point ruled in this division at the close.

International Telephone 4½s were up 2¾ points at 67¾ and the 5s jumped 3 points to 61¾, apparently reflecting further consideration of the company's favorable first-quarter earnings report.

Scarce Wheat Lifts Grains

Corn, Oats, Provisions Also Close Higher for the Day.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 9.—Indications of scarcity of hard wheat both at Kansas City and Minneapolis did much today to bring about higher prices in the wheat market here.

A premium of more than 5 cents over Chicago May delivery of wheat was reached by Kansas City May as compared with around 2¼ cents premium earlier in the week. Another bullish influence was the fact that selling pressure in the Chicago wheat market appeared to be under restraint pending issuance of the United States Government crop report expected tomorrow.

Wheat closed firm, 14@14⅝ above yesterday's finish, July 96@96⅛; corn, ¼@¾ up; July, 82⅛@82¼; oats, ½@⅞ advance, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 17 cents.

Corn and oats rallied with wheat, despite forecasts of heavy Argentine corn shipments and notwithstanding reports of Argentine weather especially favorable for conditioning and movement of corn. Provisions averaged higher, helped by suggestions of better export demand.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Imaginary Interviews.

(King George, After the Jubilee Procession).

Q. Well, your royal highness, it was some jubilee, wasn't it?

A. Ah, the good old jubilee! May it never come again!

Q. Didn't you enjoy it?

A. Now don't be silly; one really doesn't enjoy an ordeal, you know.

Q. It was a remarkable demonstration of the people's love for you and for the Queen, was it not?

A. Oh, yes, indeed, but, really, I never go through one of those superspectacles without wishing the love could be manifested with less discomfort.

Q. Did Queen Mary stand it well?

A. You know how the Queen is; she takes everything stolidly and with great dignity. She pretended to enjoy it, but I noticed she was awfully relieved when she got home and took her shoes off. I was glad to get mine off, too, I can tell you.

* * * *

Q. Why did your shoes hurt? You didn't walk.

A. There was quite a bit of walking; even in riding around hour after hour in a coach it is surprising how one's cats can ache.

Q. One's cats?

A. That is what you Americans call feet, is it not?

Q. You mean dogs?

A. Oh, yes; well, anyhow my Dalmatians were jolly well exhausted.

* * * *

Q. It must have thrilled you and the Queen riding through those great lanes of cheering subjects.

A. After 25 years of being King all parades get to seem alike.

Q. What are the effects during such a great celebration?

A. I should say one feels fairly exhilarated for the first few hours, but along about 2 p. m. one becomes quite exhausted.

* * * *

Q. I suppose you can't take a stimulant during the parade?

A. Not even a cigarette in the royal coach. Confidentially, though, the Queen did bring some spirits of ammonia. Very thoughtful, the Queen. All in all, we managed to survive it rather well, don't you think?

Q. You look splendid. How do you feel?

A. Oh, the Queen and I both are pretty much under the weather, but we've adopted a plan which will make us our old selves again in a few days.

Q. What's the plan?

A. We're just going to sit around in our slippers and pajamas at Buckingham. And with the shades down, too, you can jolly well bet.

Q. Why the shades down?

A. We don't even want to see a horse or carriage for a week.

Louder!

How about a Pulitzer prize for the loudest argument over the Pulitzer prizes?

Elmer Twitchell insists that the Pulitzer prize play award was made through a mistake: the judges asked for seats to "The Old Maid" but got tickets to Minsky's burlesque and never knew it.

Testimony showing how some people worked the relief funds in New York for vast sums of money makes one wonder whether or not it isn't time to ask contributions for the 100 Greediest Cases.

C. U. to Be Host Tonight to Boys In Post Contest

24-Hour Program Planned for Seven Entered in Last Competition.

A 24-hour program, arranged for seven boys competing in the fourth and last campus contest of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition will open this evening at the Catholic University of America with the finalists' reception by a committee headed by the Rev. Dr. William H. Russell. Afterward the boys will be honor guests at the university's spring band concert and will spend the night in the campus dormitories.

Rivalry will prevail tomorrow morning among the finalists as they meet with faculty examiners for oral and written tests which will determine the winner of a full tuition for the next four years at the university's college of arts and sciences or school of engineering. Campus spirit and fraternity, however, will direct the major portion of the schedule, which brings together outstanding seniors from high schools of Washington, Maryland and Virginia.

At 7:30 o'clock tonight the boys will meet in Graduates' Hall with Dr. Russell and two student-assistants on the hospitality committee —Sidney W. Russell, president of Pi Delta Epsilon, and Daniel E. Lawler, editor of the Cardinal. Dr. Otto J. Ramler, chairman of the examining committee, will instruct the boys as to procedure for the contest.

To Attend Band Concert.

At 8 o'clock they will attend the band concert in the gymnasium. The five out-of-town finalists will be dormitory guests and breakfast with Dr. Russell in the main dining hall.

The finalists are Paul Eldridge, of Eastern High School, and George E. Altmann, jr., Gonzaga High School, both of this city; George Walker Gilmer, Scottsville (Va.) High School; Robert W. Nix, jr., Waterford (Va.) High School; Milton I. Thurston, Parry McCluer High School, Buena Vista, Va.; Alan Habercom, Hagerstown (Md.) High School, and Robert J. Conner, of St. Mary's College High School, Emmitsburg, Md.

The examinations will start at 9 p. m., with Dr. Thomas G. Foran, professor of education, in charge of aptitude tests. Oral and written examinations and interviews will follow. These tests will cover college entrance subjects, including natural and social sciences, with special emphasis upon the civic problems covered by each contestant in the essay with which he has progressed into the finals.

In addition to Dr. Foran and Dr. Ramler, the examiners will be the Rev. Dr. James M. Campbell, dean of the college of arts and sciences; Ernest A. Valade, acting dean of the school of engineering; Dr. Frank O'Hara, professor of political economy, and Dr. John J. Meng, of the department of politics.

Sightseeing Tour Planned.

The contestants will be luncheon guests in the main dinning hall at 1 o'clock, and at 2 they will embark on a sightseeing tour of Washington and nearby Virginia, with a stop-over visit through the plant of The Washington Post. At 4:45 they will return to Gibbons Hall on the campus, where the scholarship winner will be announced.

Other final winners already selected in the current Post competition include four chosen at American University and two at Howard University. The American winners are Odell Rosen, Hancock (Md.) High School; Virginia S. Heintz, Allegany High School, Cumberland, Md., and Nellie S. Strong and William Ashby Jump, both of Western High School, this city. The Howard winners are John Harvey Euell, jr., Cardozo High School, this city, and Reginald Burns, Booker T. Washington High School, Staunton, Va.

Another scholarship, offered by the Georgetown University Foreign Service School, awaits the breaking of a tie between Samuel Temin, Eastern High School, and Carl Francis Garges, St. John's High School, this city, which resulted at campus finals at Georgetown Saturday.

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

BAKER.

WHEN and if the soldier bonus is paid, prospects seem to be vague for any appreciable expansion in personnel at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, which would issue the two billion-odd dollars in currency.

Director A. W. Hall said last night much would depend on the denominations of the currency and the type — whether a new design would be needed. If new plates have to be made, that would involve more time and additional employes. The bureau is now at work on current issues.

No additional employes would be enrolled at Veterans' Administration, officials say, holding that the present staff is adequate to handle the flood.

Philip H. Groggins (F) and Raymond H. Nagel (P), both of Agriculture, are inventors of a process for the condensation of organic acids and their anhydrides, according to the Friedel and Crafts reaction. The process employs halogen carriers, such as finely powdered metals. The method will be applicable in the manufacture of medicine and perfumes.

Aggies Begin Practice.

The Department of Agriculture track team, which won the Government track meet last year, has begun practice at Central High School with H. E. Bryor (C) in charge. The girls will be under direction of Charlotte Wade (P), individual star of 1934.

The chap you see leading a pet fox around town on a leash is Ted Waggy (C), FHA, one of Washington's first amateur pilots.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor, today, between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Earl Carroll's Vanities; screen, Charles Bufterworth, in "Baby Face Harrington"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Frederic March and Charles Laughton in "Les Miserables"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (second week of Lionel Barrymore, Bela Lugosi and Elizabeth Allan, in "Mark of the Vampire").

Ben A. Shaw (F), Coast Guard, is the proud holder of a medal received from the Government for selling a large number of Liberty Bonds during the war.

Reallocation Right Urged.

Immediate restoration of the full and unqualified reallocation privilege is requested in resolutions adopted at the May meeting of the Society of Federal Translators, under direction of Burton H. Lamore, State Department, society president.

Following the business session, Miss Gertrude Holinger, Patent Office, chairman of the research committee, presided at a forum. Henry P. Lewis, Bureau of Insular Affairs, addressed the society on "The Origin and Development of the Spanish Language."

Winners in the Federal Bridge League's summer duplicate games this week were Mrs. A. Deighton and Mrs. Marian Athey, 62½ match points; Mr. and Mrs. K. S. Gibson, 61, and E. E. Eisenhart and J. F. Smith, 60½. The games are held at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT yesterday was presented with the first copy of "Memo to F. D. R.," a book by Ray F. Smythe, feature publicity writer at FHA.

SMYTHE.

The volume offers the first constructive close-up of the people who are administering the national housing act, and the banking, industrial and employment problems with which this group is dealing.

"Memo to F. D. R." tells informally of the measures which were taken in organizing FHA and the progress made; of executives and clerks. Mr. Smythe suggests remedies for troublesome problems.

Hampton Choir Sings Here Tonight at 8:15

The Hampton Institute Choir, Dr. Clarence Cameron White, director, will be presented at 8:15 p. m. today in the auditorium of the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, by the Mus-Art Club of Lincoln Temple Congregational Church, with the music department of divisions 10-13 of public schools co-operating.

The choir, under Dr. White's direction, is said to afford an entirely new conception of this famous group of singers, who became internationally known under direction of the colored composer, Dr. Nathaniel Dett. They will render a mixed program ranging from sixteenth century chorales to modern lyric choruses and spirituals, with one of the Russian numbers in the native tongue.

PURE PAPER FOR CHESTERFIELDS

They use 300 gallons of fresh water a minute to purify the clean flax linen pulp that Chesterfield paper is made of Champagne Paper Co., mill where Chesterfield paper is made.

Slitting and winding wide rolls of cigarette paper into reels.

Over and over again they boil and wash the pure flax linen shreds before they are rolled out into thin crisp paper and cut into rolls for Chesterfield cigarettes.

Every step in the manufacture and everything about the big modern factory where Chesterfield paper is made is spotless and clean.

Purity
Right burning quality
No taste or odor

There is no better paper made than that used on Chesterfield—another thing that makes it a milder, better-tasting cigarette.
